Mosquitoes Close Mills on Western Gulf Coast
Connell, Tex., Nov. 17.—The gulf coast region of East Texas and the western part of Louisiana have been afflicted with the worst scourge of mosquitoes ever known. Several large lumber mills were forced to close down on account of the pest. Men and animals were tortured by the bites of the insects. Cattle and horses were attacked by veritable hordes of mosquitoes, and the animals huddled together in groups, in an effort to protect themselves as much as possible from the bites. Upon the farms smudge fires were kept burning constantly to drive away the pests, but these efforts seemed to be of little avail.

AMUSEMENTS

ORPHEUM—To-night, at 8:20, Margaret Woodrow Wilson. Monday evening, November 20 — Burton Holmes. Wednesday, matinee and night, November 22 — Blanche Ring in "Broadway and Buttermilk." MAJESTIC—Vaudeville. COLONIAL—Grand Prince. REGENT—Charlie Chaplin. VICTORIA—"The Iron Woman."

Wilson G. Smith, an influential Cleveland critic, has said of Miss Wilson: "There are no efforts at vocal chicaneery to catch her audience; her attitude towards her art and her auditors is one of genuine earnestness to interpret the musical language she loves, without self-exploitation. The sincerity and her artistic predilection is shown in her selection and interpretation of one of Robert Franz's too much neglected songs. If Miss Wilson had done nothing else she would have won my critical esteem." Another famous critic has written: "Her voice is particularly attractive in the medium range, and does not lack telling quality and effectiveness in the higher register. The latter quality is well displayed in the eloquent peroration of Strauss' 'Zugung.'" Both of the above-mentioned songs were included in Miss Wilson's program for this evening's concert at the Orpheum Theater. In the latter, "Zugung," by Strauss, Miss Wilson will have the support of Melville Clark, harpist, and Mrs. Ross W. David at the piano.

The increasing demands made upon Burton Holmes by the larger cities, have compelled him to add more courses to them each season, thus making it compulsory for him to drop from his annual lecturing tour, many of the smaller cities. To-day his appearances are confined to only ten cities, which take all the time he can spare from his foreign travels. "Canada—From Coast to Coast," the first of the series of five travelogues to be presented this season, is a big phase. It suggests the territorial vastness of a continent-wide domain; it forestalls the criticisms of achievement past; it recalls the epic labors of a strenuous race of pioneers; it pictures a land of limitless possibilities; it lures the traveler with the promise of a transcendent journey unsurpassed in all the realms of travel. Burton Holmes crossed Canada from coast to coast during the past summer, and he will retrace his steps with his audience, Monday evening, November 20, at the Orpheum Theater, via "the picture-route."

Jolly, jovial, joyous Blanche Ring, whose infectious good nature and haunting songs have earned her safely through seasons that have brought disaster to many other players of note in this age of the motion picture craze, comes to the Orpheum next Wednesday, matinee and night, in William Hack's new song comedy, "Broadway and Buttermilk" said to be a worthy successor to "The Yankee Girl" and "Wall Street Girl" and "When Claudia Smiles." The play is something entirely different from anything in which Miss Ring has hitherto appeared, but its success has been emphatic in Chicago, New York and other cities in which it has been seen.

James T. Powers comes to the Orpheum Saturday, matinee and evening, November 25, in "Somebody's Luggage," a comedy by Rex Swartz, based on a novel written by J. F. Handall. Mr. Powers has the role of Algonquin Hopper, who is in love with a girl in the Secret Service, and while following her across the English Channel finds himself in possession of the portmanteau of a man who has been blown overboard. Hopper then faces the problem of proving his identity.

The picturization of Margaret DeLand's great story, "The Iron Woman," is an extraordinary emotional production. The eminent star, Nance O'Neil, the American rival of the "divine" Bernhardt, was chosen to play the important role of Sarah Maitland, the woman who manages the iron mills left her by her husband. A series of scenes taken in the steel mills add a great deal of realism to the play. An all-star cast is seen in support of Miss O'Neil. "The Romance of Harrisburg," the picture that has caused no end of favorable comment, will also be shown to-day and to-morrow. "The Hidden Secret" starring Ethel Clayton and Halbrook Blynn, will be the attraction for to-morrow.

They are there—all of them—the busy director, with his megaphone; the camera man, the up-stage hand, the electricians, with their pies; the stage-struck country girl, the band of carpenters and stage hands. And in addition, there is Charlie Chaplin. So everyone who has ever longed to glimpse a motion picture in the making should not miss seeing "Behind the Scenes" at the Regent to-day and to-morrow. "Behind the Scenes" is replete with typical Chaplin business, the great big puny scenes that bring down the house. Charlie's funny make-up has made him the premiere comedian of the screen. It seems as if all the funny situations which were ever thought of have been gathered in this one piece. "The Power of Mind" a thrilling drama, will be shown to-day also. This unusual film drama treats of the influence of the criminal mind on the mind of his daughter, who believes she has inherited criminal instincts until informed that her real father was an honest man. The cast includes Edward Coxen, Lizette Thorne, George Field and others.

There are girls galore at the Majestic the last half of this week. Not a man is seen on the stage, and the reason for this is that the bill at that theater is an all-girl bill and everyone that has seen the show speaks favorably of it. The feature attraction is "Mammy" Jennie's Birthday," an act composed of eight girls, who introduce a series of specialties that are both pleasing and entertaining. The stage setting is attractive, while the gowns worn by the girls are very pretty, both of which tend to make the act a pleasing "sight production." Lillian Fitzgerald, eccentric comedienne, furnishes a great deal of amusement, while Georgette and Capitola entertain with songs and dances. Completing the bill are the three Darling Girls, a trio of women on a swinging trapeze, who do some very good acrobatic posing; and June and Irene Melva, in a refined instrumental musical offering.

H. B. Warner will be seen at the Colonial Theater to-day and to-morrow in a play that is a little different from the usual picture play. His Colonial new vehicle is a five-part drama of love and adventure, called "A Vagabond Prince," the story of a petted young nobleman, who came to America in search of adventure and became the dominant figure in this delightful romance. Warner is first seen in the role of Prince Tomahair to the throne of Bothalia, dissatisfied with his princely confinement, and then the optimistic adventurer, who arrives in San Francisco and falls in love with "Pluffy" of the dance halls. A new two-reel Keystone comedy called "Haystacks and Steeples," will be the added attraction of the program.

She says that for his comfort, she trimmed his beard and cut his hair.
