erate with the same purpose as if they were officially affiliated. He also made it plain that the brotherhoods were not bringing their eight-hour day "troubles" to the Federation for support.

Will Fight for Short Day

"I am about anarchist enough, however," he said, "to say that we are going to work for the eight-hour day for all classes. If we can't get it peacefully, we will fight for it."

Lee said that some sort of affiliation should be effected to fight any proposed arbitration legislation which might be unfair to labor. President Wilson plans such legislation, Lee said, and it should be carefully watched. He declared that Congress had no right to pass any law compelling a man to work, provided he was not in prison, if he did not want to, and he did not think it would do so.

"IT BUILT ME UP," SAYS H. M. WALTERS

Indigestion and a Torpid Liver Made Him Headachy, Nervous and Miserable All Over

TANLAC BRACED HIM UP

Folks who know H. M. Walters, who has a profitable truck farm near Mechanicsburg, Pa., are congratulating him on his improved appearance, a man of which, he says, is due to the beneficial effects of Tanlac, the master medicine.

Speaking of his almost miraculous recovery, Mr. Walters says, "I was headachy, nervous and all run down from the effects of a torpid liver and nervous indigestion, and catarrh of the stomach."

"I was utterly miserable all the time. I couldn't eat a thing without suffering intensely afterwards for my stomach did not digest my food, but it would just lie there in a heavy lump and throw off gas that would fill me up so that it used to press against my heart making it jump and pound until I felt as if I could suffocate."

"My nerves were on the ragged edge. I was irritable, restless and couldn't sleep at night except in snatches and I would get up in the mornings feeling tired, with pains in my back and sort of stiff all over."

"But I date my return to health from the day that I read a piece in the paper about Tanlac helping a man who suffered as I did. I bought a bottle of this wonderful medicine and it helped me from the very first dose."

"Now it has rid me of my headaches, my appetite is good and my food digests as it should and I sleep fine all night long, waking up fresh and rested every morning. My nerves are in fine shape, too, in fact, Tanlac has built me up all over."

Tanlac, the famous reconstructive tonic and invigorant is now being specially introduced here at Gorgas' drug store where the Tanlac man is meeting the people and explaining the merits of this master medicine.

Only several different races turned out. A night will be set apart during the week for each race.

for her working people than any other State and we hope to do still more.

"It is the business of the Commonwealth to make laws which will enable its people when not at work to lead clean, righteous lives. It has been found that most of the crimes against society have been committed in hours of leisure. Already there are signs of the movement to conserve the welfare of the people at leisure in recreation places and better houses in the cities and the taking away from the people of the dangers which surround them when they are not at work. Public sentiment is tending in that direction and the laws will follow."

The Governor's address, which followed the opening of the conference by Commissioner John Price Jackson, of the Department of Labor and Industry, was followed with the most intense interest on the part of the audience which filled the hall of the House. The Governor spoke with an air of earnestness and his introduction of the new proposition had been made in a general statement of results by Chairman Harry A. Mackey, of the State Compensation Board, followed by discussion of the subject from the standpoint of employers, employees, medical men, State officials and others.

"After carefully considering all that has been done since this law went into operation," said Mr. Mackey, "we can claim that ten months' experience under this law has thoroughly justified its existence. We maintain that its accomplishments have spelled success for the scheme of compensation. We confidently assert that the whole proposition of humanitarian legislation has been mightily advanced because of the fact that Pennsylvania's brain and conscientious men have led the forces behind this great movement."

"The employers of Pennsylvania have accepted the act by quietly complying under its terms," Mr. Mackey said, "for the act provides that the em-

I soon found that Mr. Wood had not only broken every agreement made at that time, but that he also failed to carry out his promises made to me. I also ascertained that money that should have been used to pay claims was paid out to Mr. Wood and Mr. Welch as salaries, notwithstanding the fact that they were no officials of the company. I then started an investigation of the other activities controlled by Mr. Wood and uncovered his scheme of getting possession of the assets and stock of seventy-eight life insurance companies by exchanging 'hot air common and smoke preferred' stocks and bonds of the Consolidated Investment Company, Delaware corporation, for the stock of the various insurance companies.

Employer in failing to give his employees notice of his rejection of the act shall be construed to have accepted the same."

Showing how well satisfied some of the great corporations of the state are with the compensation law, Mr. Mackey read a letter dated October 12 from the claim agent of one of the big railroads, saying that his company is pleased with the manner in which it is working out and that "it is much cheaper and more economical than claims were under the common law liability which existed before the adoption of this law."

The company, this agent said, had found that the operation of the law afforded a comparatively cheap means of adjusting damage claims and a more liberal and certain means of compensation for the employee through the elimination of court costs and delay.

Mr. Mackey gave the total number of compensation cases since the law went into effect, January 1, 1916, as 65,826, of which 2,113 were fatal cases. Of the total 41,600 have been satisfactorily adjusted. Of the 2,113 fatal cases 592 compensation agreements have been approved by the board, the amount in these cases being $2,625,244.44 to dependents. $95,123.88 of which has already been paid. The amount required to pay the disability claims to date is $988,659.28.

"We find," said Mr. Mackey, "in the bituminous coal region there were 4,422 compensation cases, 139 being fatal, and in the anthracite region 6,558 compensation cases, 333 being fatal. We also find that a majority of the men killed are Americans and that it requires between $2,500 and $2,600 to pay the dependents in fatal cases."

"Discussion of the compensation act was marked by some sharp criticisms of casualty companies and railroads. A. B. Farquhar, who spoke on the law for the employers' standpoint, said that it should be kept as it is for two years without being changed so that there could be a thorough try-out. Representative James H. Maurer of the present bill of the State Federation of Labor, declared that while the law was praiseworthy it should be changed and that the fourteen-day period in which no compensation could be paid should be reduced as it caused suffering. permanent injury compensation he should be extended and a more liberal provision made as regards dependents. He charged that some casualty companies had evaded payments on compensation and said that if they persisted it would mean general State insurance. Railroad companies which take advantage of the inter-State commerce law were denounced by Mr. Maurer.

After the noon meeting many delegates were received by the Governor at the Executive Department.
