DON'T NEGLECT KIDNEYS.

Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Prescription, Overcomes Kidney Trouble.

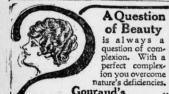

It is now conceded by physicians that the kidneys should have more attention as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood. The kidneys should receive some assistance when needed. We take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich, heavy food, thereby fotcing the Ridneys to do more work than nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble such as lame back, annoying bladder troubles, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, sallow complexion, rheumatism, maybe weak or irregular heart action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more sericus trouble.

A man of good scholarship, loving sport and taking an interest in practically all the arts, the new emperor has been comparatively seldom in the limelight. Until his assassination Archduke Francis Ferdinand was the center of interest in Austria-Hungary.

Archduke Francis Ferdinand was the center of interest in Austria-Hungary as the heir apparent to the throne.

Then the war, which came so suddenly on the heels of the murder of the archduke, and all interest in the new heir apparent was overshadowed by the interest in the war itself.

In Persenbeug Charles Francis Joseph was born on August 17, 1887. He attended public school in Vienna, this being a great shock to those who wanted to adhere closely to royal etiquette.

plunged into the deepest sorrow by the death of the emperor-king, best wishes were showered upon the monarch. He is democratic in the extreme and much for his popularity doubtlessly was founded on his early associations with the sons of workingmen.

Devoted to Wife

Perhaps the most noteworthy characteristic of Charles Francis Joseph, the new emperor, and the one that has been remarked the most frequently, is his devotion to his wife, who was the Princess Zita, of the Bourbon house of Parma.

what Pity Did!

Gillian is not a stranger around newspaper offices. Until recently he was a "colyumer" on an Indianapolis daily, being required to turn in a column of real, live himor every day. As he lectures five or six nights every week he had to quit the column so he could get some sleep. Once he had a job on a Richmond, Ind., paper, where he was managing editor, telegraph editor, proof reader, all the reporters and collector. They paid him $12 a week. Saturday night the owner's usual query was, "How much can you get along with till Monday?" Gillilan finally figured that inasmuch as he wasn't getting anything for working he might as well quit work; and he did. Then citizens who felt sorry for him, because of his pitiful look, did everything they could to help him and he made $50 or $60 a week. It was hard work maintaining that Thifful look, but Gillian managed it. Then finally he found another $12 job and the helping hands laid off.

To Write For Penn Way Bulletin
One thing Gillilan did yesterday was promise the William Penn Highway secretary that he'd write something for the initial issue of the William Penn Highway Bulletin, which appears Docember 1. Among other well known contributors will be Judd Mortimer Lewis of the Houston Post, and Edgar A. Guest of the Detroit Free Press. And according to the William Penn man, if Gillilan writes something like his famous "Me an' Pap an Mother" there won't be a Bulletin for sale anywhere three days after it comes from the press. Some of these days, too, Gallilan is coming back to Harrisburg to lecture. He certainly had an appreciative audience in the Telegraph office last evening. Bolton late yesterday afternoon to don his horse-collar suit, which all the regular lecturers wear, and which he wore incognite on the train to Chambersburg, thus saving time, Mr. Gililan spent an hour or so in the Telegraph office. His introductionist was Secretary "Me!" James of the William Penn Highway, also a member of the American Press Humorists' Association.

of the American Press Humorists' Association.

Odsooks! Crushed!
One of the Telegraph men Gillilan met was the city editor, who sort of crushed the humorist with, "Glad to meet you, Mr. Gillilan, but you're not nearly so homely as folks have been telling me you were."

Gillilan said, speaking of homely men, that a couple of well-piped individuals met one day; and one said to the other in astonishment, "By Jingo, I've seen lots of homely men, but never one quite so homely as you. You have the worst face I ever saw on a human being. You are absolutely the worst I ever saw."

And the other man let that go by without taking offense. Whereupon, from the first fellow:

"Yes, str, your face is positively disgusting to me and I don't see how they let you live."

Then the other lad riled up a bit and snarled:

"Well, it ain't my fault is it? I was Then the other lad ried up a bit and snarled:

"Well, it ain't my fault is it? I was born with this face."
This was a new thought to the first man and he pondered over it. Finally.

"Yes, I guess there's something to that. (More pondering.) But, say! you could stay in the house, couldn't you?"

you could stay in the house, couldn't you?".

A Story of the Poct, Riley Gillilan knew "Bob" Burdette very well, indeed. He calls Burdette the patron saint of his house; and his son is named after Burdette. Once in Indianapolis Gillilan was out on Lockerbie street at the home of James Whitcomb Riley, and the two came around after awhile to "Bob" Burdette, whose death had just been recorded in the papers.

"Jim," said Gillilan, "Bob' Burdette was the kind of man who meant it when he said 'God bless you."

"Yes, Gillilan," replied Riley. "And God meant it, too, when 'Bob' said it."

Riley and "Bill" Nye
Riley and "Bill" Nye were traveling one day, Gillilan said yesterday, and coming to a water-stop at a tank town they stayed in the coach rather than go out on the platform and undergo the stares they usually got when folks found out who they were.
But a man on the platform remembered that he knew Riley's father;
and he entered the coach. Riley and

"Are you Mr. Riley?" he said, loud-
