Shows More Deaths as Result of Speeding Up

Industrial accidents with fatal endings were more numerous in October than in any month of this year and the "speeding up" due to rush orders is largely to blame. In the month there were 287 persons killed out of 25,585 hurt.

Commissioner John Price Jackson, of the Department of Labor and Industry, in announcing these figures to day, as compiled by the Bureau of Statistics and Information, pointed out that the total number of killed and injured employes, in Pennsylvania, up to November 1, aggregates 209,843. Of that number 2,114 were killed. For each day in 1916, up to November 1, there were 820 industrial work. For each day in 1916, up to November 1, there were 820 industrial work ers killed or injured. The monthly average is 211 killed and 20,773 injured. The record of killed and injured in the industries, during the first ten months of this year, is as follows:

BEAUTIFUL, REMODELED AND ENLARGED STORE,

Embracing Floors of Nos. 8, 10 and 12 South Fourth Street

Beginning Tomorrow, Saturday Morning, At 8

For weeks we have been waiting for the day that the contractor would complete his work, and we could invite you to come to this bigger, better store.

Difficulty in securing materials - a common occurence in these days-somewhat retarded the work, but the finished product was well worth waiting for.

The first floors of three buildings are now utilized—Nos. 8, 10 and 12 South Fourth Street - providing bright and commodious quarters for the display of wider stocks and your greater shopping

A handsome, uniform front over the three buildings provides unusually attractive display windows.

We are proud of this new store-proud to welcome you to itand in celebration of the occasion

We inaugurate to-morrow a merchandising event in which exceptional qualities in stylish, new apparel are offered at prices little short of daring for places 1,968 were referred to employers seeking help. The number of workers asked for by employers was 2,658, in which list were a number of calls for specially qualified persons and also suggestions of openings for one armed and one-legged persons. The greatest demand was for unskilled labor, while men with knowledge of machinery were much desired.

The reports for October show that the Philadelphia office had the most business, there having been 1,317 applicants for positions of whom 1,121 were referred to places, while employers asked State aid in getting 1,186 workers. The number of positions filled was 946. The Pittsburgh office came next with 479 places filled, 544 referred to positions, 843 applicants and 789 workers asked for. Other offices show:
