RAISING FUNDS FOR FIRE TRUCK

Firemen and Citizens of Mt. Union Co-operating in Plans to Secure Auto Apparatus

POSTMASTER IS BURIED

Loaded Truck Blown on Railroad Tracks and Struck by Freight Train

Mount Union, Pa., Dec. 2.—A committee has been appointed to make plans for special features, such as fairs, tag days, etc., for the raising of money to buy a new auto truck. Samuel Musser and Mr. Chauncey, of the fire company, were appointed on the committee, and Professor W. P. Harley and Professor C. C. Smith, of the public schools, were named to represent the school people in the cause. Mount Union witnessed one of the largest funerals held here for some time on Wednesday, when Postmaster Alonzo W. Jones was buried. The funeral was led by the Grand Army veterans and drum corps. Services were held in the Methodist Church. A loaded truck was blown onto the railroad tracks on Sunday night by the high wind and it was struck by a freight train and smashed, also wrecking about five yards of iron fence. A. A. Minnick, father of Dr. J. M. Minnick, returned to his home at Ashville, N. C., after visiting his son. The Aetna Explosives Company started work yesterday morning and will continue to employ men until they have increased their force to about 2,000, it is announced. The Rev. S. S. Cornell delivered the Thanksgiving sermon in the Presbyterian Church on Thanksgiving Day. The jenny train on the Pennsylvania railroad started last Saturday to make two trips daily between Huntingdon and Mount Union and yesterday two more trains were added. The local Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church had as its guests Monday night the sister society from Newton Hamilton. Dr. C. E. Culver and family and Miss Vera Miller, of town, and Miss Eugenia James, of Arbissonia, motored to Philadelphia Thanksgiving Day to attend the Pennsylvania-Cornell game and visit Dr. Culver's son, Harold, who is in the dental school at the University of Pennsylvania.

NEW CONTRACT FOR PLAYERS

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 2.—Adoption of a new form of players' contract is the chief business before the special meeting of the national baseball commission here today. President E. B. Johnson, of the American League, announced that a contract which he believed to be equitable to the players and club owners had been drafted and that it probably would be adopted by the commission. He declined, however, to give any hint what the new contract contained.

DUCK CULTURE IS AS PROFITABLE AS CHICKENS

Game Qualities of the Runner Create an Appeal to the Epicure

Most Ducks Are Prolific Layers; Ducklings Make Rapid Growth

By C. S. Valentine

No student of economics will deny that the bird that grows twice as fast as all others is making for first place as a business proposition. Money thus invested can be turned over twice as fast, too, the every day outlays the alternating layer. The everyday layer is the duck.

WHITE MUSCOVY DUCK

The Muscovy Duck is claimed by some to be a goose. It is, nevertheless, very ducklike and is so classed. Its history is centuries old. It is found wild in Brazil in the same colors as it is bred in domestic barnyards, and its place of origin is generally credited to that country.

This duck is bred in both white and colored varieties; the former, the subject of this sketch, being most popular. Its plumage is snow white with bright face and knob, the legs an orange yellow. The male carries a tuft of feathers on the top of his head, which under certain conditions he raises. The male is usually very large, often attaining twelve pounds, while the female is rather small, never exceeding eight pounds weight. Muscovies have long and powerful wings, useful in combats with other poultry, for they are indeed quarrelsome, and for flight. They do not, however, wander far, and will return to the farm buildings at nightfall. The duck prefers to steal her nest. It is not usual for her to suddenly appear with eleven or twelve ducklings which she has hatched in some remote corner.

White Muscovy Ducks when young are of good gamey flavor and are often served as canvasbacks. When old the flesh is tough, rank and unappetizing. In consequence, they are seldom used as utility ducks on the great duck farms.

or the proprietors, buying by weight, will suffer a very small profit. An important factor in favor of Runner flesh lies in its gamey qualities, which enable restaurateurs to substitute it for real game.

Restrictions on game birds continually increase. The government is resolved to stop the illegal sale of game birds. Restrictions are placed also on the sale of their feathers. It is reported that even the grower of domesticated Millards has not been safe from interference.

The general rule has been no Spring or summer shooting, and a short opening in the Fall. Unless the disappearing wild fowl can be increased by protection, and the more intelligent birds of the people at large, domestic birds must take their place in the markets. Thus, the opening for small ducks of superior quality, like the Runner, is a most important one. And the Runner is equal to the demand.

Furthermore, the grower who produces eggs as a specialty wants small eaters with not too large bodies. Yet he wants a fair carcass to sell when he has obtained the best part of the egg yield from each bird. The quicker this can be done, the greater the profit. And because ducks lay almost daily during the best of the season, they are ideal subjects for crowding for eggs till the molt, when they can be sold for more than it cost to replace them with young stock. A Canadian breeder reports returns of $7 each from his first flock of Runners, in less than a year from table eggs.

The utility grower needs to think more than has been his custom, that he must breed his stock along the lines of weight and type, in preference to feathers. In all breeds weight tends to run down, unless the birds are bred to a standard weight. Moreover, typical birds are likely to be better layers, agricultural schools claim this is especially true of the Runner Duck.

Examine Your TEETH Tonight. After you clean them. You will find, in all probability, an accumulation of tartar on the enamel and bits of food deposit hiding between the crevices. YOUR DENTIFRICE does not FULLY CLEAN! Loss of teeth is caused usually by one of two conditions—Pyorrhea or decay, both of which develop, as a rule, only in the mouth where germ-laden tartar is present.

SENRECO, the recently discovered formula of a dental specialist, is two-fold in its action. First, it REALLY CLEANS, embodying specially prepared, soluble granules unusually effective in cleaning away food deposits. Second, it is particularly destructive to the germ of Pyorrhea. Yet it is perfectly safe, containing neither injurious chemicals nor hard grit. Avoid Pyorrhea and decay. Get Senreco from your dealer today. In large tubes, 25c. THE CERTAIN EGG DEMAND

Wherever the attention of consumers is called to duck eggs and to young duck meat in the right way, a brisk demand soon follows. The meat of the ten-to-twelve-week-old duckling is excellent. Some claim the young Runner duck is the best poultry meat to be had. When the layers are properly handled, duck eggs are so sweet and rich that they equal hen's eggs. No market informed as to the quality and value of duck eggs will neglect to stock up especially those from the Indian Runner. The eggs of the Pekin and Aylesbury crowd the large goose eggs for size. The Runner egg sometimes reaches four ounces, averaging nearly three ounces; while the Pekin eggs average four to five ounces.

Add to this three other facts, viz., (a) that ducks thrive on a goodly proportion of cheap food; (b) that the skillful grower seldom loses a duckling; (c) that there is now a steady demand for these products, and it will be seen the duck industry holds a favorable place with the household poultry hen.

Producing Market Ducklings

Many growers who raise green ducks for market look askance at the Runner, or at any of the small breeds of ducks. They want the Pekin, which weigh ten pounds or more to the pair when ready for market. Pekins, Aylesburys and Rouens, with a standard weight of nine pounds for adult males, are probably the only birds, except geese, that will make an average of half a pound a week of growth for the first ten weeks.

Producers of green ducks want a bird that grows rapidly, fattens easily, has white "fem" and of which the male and female are nearly equal in size. Even these meat producers demand a breed that lays well, else they cannot save enough young stock.

Despite their size, Runners lead all other ducks, even for meat. Some have said, the smaller the Runner the better. For instance, a grower of Runners for high-class hotel or restaurant trade may be found urging that round-bodied birds smaller than standard should be selected as breeders. There are several reasons for this. One is that the wild birds for which they are sometimes substituted are usually of a small, round-bodied type. Another reason is, if there is too much weight, the charge per portion must be increased to the customer,
