(Continued.) "Don't mention it. Here is Mme. On Dit's column for tomorrow. It runs on the first page. As for the rest of the paper, suit yourselves."

O'Neill took the copy and glanced through it. "Are there no libel laws down here?" he asked.

"The material in that column," said the little man, his eyes narrowing, "concerns only me. You must understand that at once."

"The madame writes hot stuff," ventured O'Neill. "I am the madame," said the owner of the Mail with dignity.

He removed the copy from O'Neill's hand and glided with it into the other room. Scarcely had he disappeared when the door was opened furiously and a panting man stood inside. Mr. Henry Trimmer's keen eye surveyed the scene.

"Where's Mears—Elliott?" he cried. "You're not the cashier, are you?" asked O'Neill with interest.

"Don't try to be funny," roared Trimmer. "I'm looking for the editor of this paper."

"Your search is ended," O'Neill replied. "What is it?" "You mean you—say! I've got a front page story for tomorrow's issue that will upset the town."

"Come to my arms," cried O'Neill. "What is it?" "The real Lord Harrowby has been kidnapped."

O'Neill stared at him sorrowfully. "Have you been reading the Duchess again?" he asked. "Who is Lord Harrowby?"

"Do you mean to say you don't know? Where have you been buried alive?" "Out of the inner room glided Manuel Gonzale, and, recognizing him, Mr. Trimmer poured into his ear the story of George's disappearance. Mr. Gonzale rubbed his hands.

"A good story," he said. "A very good story. Thank you, a thousand times. I myself will write it."

With a scornful glance at the two strangers, Mr. Trimmer went out, and Manuel Gonzale sat down at his desk. O'Neill and Howe returned to their encyclopedic dispatches.

"There you are," said Gonzale at last, standing. "Put an eight column head on that, please, and run it on the front page. A very fine story. The paper must go to press"—he looked at his watch—"in an hour. Only four pages. Please see to the makeup. My circulation manager will assist you with the distribution." At the door he paused. "It occurs to me that your exchequer may be low. Seventy-five dollars a week for the managing editor. Fifty for the city editor. Allow me—$10 each, in advance. If you need more pray remind me."

Into their hands he put crinkling bills. And then, gliding still like the fox he looked, he went out into the night.

"Sister," cried O'Neill weakly, "the fairies are abroad tonight. I hear the rustle of their feet over the grass."

Friday morning found Mr. Minot ready for whatever diplomacy the day might demand of him. He had a feeling that the demand would be great. The unheralded arrival of Miss Gabrielle Rose and her packet of letters presented no slight complication. Whatever the outcome of any suit she might start against Harrowby, Minot was sure that the mere announcement of it would be sufficient to blast Jephson's hopes for all time. Old Spencer Meyrick, already inflamed by the episode of the elder brother, was not likely to take coolly the publication of Harrowby's incriminating letters.

After an early breakfast Minot sent a cable to Jephson telling of Miss Rose's arrival and asking for information about her.

Lunch time came—2 o'clock. At 2:30, out of London, Jephson spoke. Said his cable:

Know nothing of G. R. except that she's been married frequently. Do best you can. And what help was this, pray? Disgustedly Minot read the cable again. Four o'clock the respite he had asked from the Gaiety lady was coming on apace, and with every tick of the clock his feeling of helplessness grew. He mentally berated Thacker and Jephson. They left him alone to grapple with wild problems, offering no help and asking miracles. Confound them both!

Three o'clock came. What—what was he to say? Lord Harrowby, interrogated, was merely useless and frantic. He couldn't raise a shilling. He couldn't offer a suggestion. "Dear old chap," he moaned, "I depend on you."

Three-thirty! Well, Thacker and Jephson had asked the impossible, that was all. Minot felt he had done his best. No man could do more. He was very sorry for Jephson, but—golden before him opened the possibility of Miss Cynthia Meyrick free to be wooed.

Yet he must be faithful to the last. At a quarter to four he read Jephson's cablegram again. As he read, a plan ridiculous in its ineffectiveness occurred to him. And since no other came in the interval before 4 he walked into Miss Rose's presence determined to try out his weak little bluff.

CHAPTER X. Tears From the Gaiety. THE Gaiety lady was playing on the piano—a whispering, seductive little tune. As Minot stepped to her side she glanced up at him with a coy inviting smile. But she drew back a little at his determined glare.

"Miss Rose," he said sharply, "I have discovered that you can not sue Lord Harrowby for breach of contract to marry you."

Resinol first aid for skin troubles

"Will Resinol Ointment really stop this dreadful itching and clear my eczema away?" "Madam, if you only knew as much about Resinol as doctors do—how safe it is to use, how promptly it acts—you would not doubt, you would use it at once. Usually it stops itching immediately and soon removes every bit of eruption."

Resinol Ointment is so nearly flesh-colored that it can be used on exposed surfaces without attracting undue attention. Sold by all druggists. For sample free, write to Dept. 372-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

M L STANDS FOR Mentho Laxene Cold, Cough and Catarrh Medicine for Young and Old.

You buy it of any well stocked drug-gist in 2 1/2 oz. bottles and take it in ten-drop doses, or better yet, mix it with simple sugar syrup, made by dissolving 3/4 of a pound of granulated sugar in a half-pint of boiling water. It is so easy to make a whole pint of cold and cough syrup that tens of thousands of mothers make it every year for their loved ones.

All agree that this home-made cough syrup is free from harmful drugs, and that only a few doses are required for each case, so that a pint may last a family throughout the winter season.

For colds, catarrh, cough, and bronchitis, there is nothing superior for prompt, lasting relief. Guaranteed by the Blackburn Products Co., Dayton, Ohio, to please or money back.
