

SAYS HE TOOK GIRL TO HOTEL TO ADVISE HER

Gougler home and at the end of that time her mother got urgent word to come to see her. Gougler, however, decided to take the child home and it was charged, he arranged to meet her a few days later in this city.

The mother followed the child to Harrisburg, saw Gougler meet her daughter and then notified a policeman. With the policeman she saw Gougler and the girl hurry across Market street from the Union station entrance, enter the hotel in question and hurry upstairs to the office.

The Arrest
Gougler, according to the witness, laid a dollar on the counter for a room and was standing with pen poised over the register when the policeman tapped him on the shoulder. And when the officer told him he was under arrest he said he "wanted his money back."

Later in the police station he declared that he had no sinister purpose in taking the child into the hotel—he said he only wanted give her "fatherly" advice.

In relating her story Josephine declared that she went to the hotel in obedience to Gougler's request, as he said he "wanted to tell her something."

Gougler in his own defense intimated that Josephine's conduct was not what it should be and he wished to "talk to her like a father," as he thought well of her.

"Couldn't you have given her the 'fatherly advice' on the street? Was it necessary to take her to the hotel to give her this 'fatherly advice'?" snapped Mr. Stroup.

"Well, I thought it was too sunny," explained the prisoner.

Furthermore, he explained that he only intended renting the room for the little girl, as she had no place to go.

Wants His Money Back
"That was your only reason for taking her to the hotel, was it—that, and to give her 'fatherly advice'?" demanded Mr. Stroup. "You only wanted to get a room for her?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then why did you ask the clerk to give you your money back?"
It was then that Additional Law Judge McCarrell had to gently suggest that the witness probably be submitted to grand jury.

The case was given to the jury late this afternoon.

The last addition is valued at about $50 and includes a monogrammed wrist watch, three bracelets, two lockets and a silver mesh bag. Mrs. Proctor was not held.

Rewards aggregating several hundred dollars will be paid the city detectives by people of other towns, for the work that resulted in the capture of the biggest wholesale robbers that have been known to the police department.

Thos. H. Ince's CIVILIZATION

The most astounding, appalling picture of modern warfare that has been or can be conceived. More than one year was required for its making. Its production cost more than one million dollars. Two armies of infantry, cavalry, artillery; fleets of war vessels: battleships, aeroplanes, submarines; every other scientific death-dealing device that this century has produced were utilized to make it a battle-drama comprehensive and convincing. Real cities were built to be destroyed. The United States navy co-operated in the staging of its sea fights. A hundred other huge, original, stunning features make it a cinema-spectacle beyond comparison or description.

Accuses Railroads of Trying to Ruin Their Own Credit by Pessimism

Washington, Dec. 9. — Railroads were accused of trying to ruin their own credit and laying the foundation for federal ownership, by Max Thelen, president of the Association of Railway Commissioners in resuming his testimony to-day before the congressional railroad investigating committee.

"The railroads are in a hysteria of pessimism," he said. "With earnings beyond all previous records and constantly growing larger, the railroads seem to be engaged in the absurd task of trying to ruin their own credit. If they were really acting in the public interest, as they claim to be, they would stop complaining about public regulation and would devote themselves to supplying the cars, equipment, terminal facilities and extensions which the public urgently requires. Federal incorporations of the railroads as proposed by the carriers has for its avowed object the taking from the people of the States their power to regulate the purely State rates, service, equipment, and facilities of practically every railroad in

Mothers From All Parts of State Offer Babies

Dozens of letters from all parts of the State have been received by John Yates, secretary of the Associated Aid Societies, in response to his announcement that he had requests for babies from at least twenty families. In many of these letters mothers offered to sacrifice little tots because of want and privation and inability to provide for the children. Other pathetic little stories were told, too, of families in need of help. Recently the Telegraph published the announcement of Secretary Yates for babies. Since then letters have been coming in daily and in several instances needy families wrote for aid. These letters have been referred to bureaus in the cities in which the destitute families reside. But none of the replies, offering babies were received from families in Dauphin county, and Secretary Yates said that he cannot take children from any other part of Pennsylvania.
