Co-operation of Civic Bodies Former Owner of Steelton Re-Needed in Improving Health Conditions

The importance of co-operation or

The importance of co-operation on the part of civic organizations in promoting better health conditions in any community, was emphasized by J. Lindley Hosford, of the State Department of Health, in an illustrated lecture at a banquet given in honor of members of the Municipal League, by the Civic Club, in Frey's Hall, Front and Pine streets, last night.

In his talk, Mr. Hosford, referred to the health conditions of the ancients. Persons died without any record being kept of the cause of their death and births were not recorded.

The important phase of his talk was on the typhoid fever germ. Moving pictures were used to show how a germ originated, grew and what methods were used by the State Board in combating the spread of the disease.

Nearly 200 persons attended the affair. In the receiving line were Mrs. R. M. Rutherford and Mrs. Charles Reinoehl, officers of the Civic Club. The Sara Lemer Trio of Harrisburg, furnished music for the evening. After the lecture refreshments were served by six girls. The committee which had charge of serving the luncheon included Mrs. William Darby, chairman; Mrs. William Nell and Mrs. Carl Brinser.

the hopelessness of that system of military preparation from the army point of view. "It is the volunteer system that is at fault," General Scott said. "It has always failed us. It is undemocratic, unreliable, inefficient and expensive."

Asked if doubling the pay of privates would improve the present system. General Scott said:
"If you increase the pay of the army to a point where it would produce a force of the size we must have, you will bankrupt the nation."
Secretary Baker told the House military committee to-day that he had not yet made up his mind whether universal compulsory military service, or a system of selective conscription, was the best methods of preparation for national defense. He discussed difficulties met with in mobilization of the National Guard and various questions connected with the lorder service.
