Some day when the turmoil of Christmas shopping is "getting on your nerves" just drop in to the cozy little tea room of the Golden Seal Drug Store, 11 S. Market Square, and you will not only find your spirits revived by a bowl of steaming boullion, or a cup of hot tea or chocolate with a dainty sandwich, but you will be delighted, too, with the numerous gift suggestions so conveniently displayed, for at this store it is easy to buy gifts for everyone. There are the splendid Ansco cameras in complete assortment, lovely sets and single pieces of white ivory, beautiful gift boxes of perfumes, Christmas stationery and most delicious candies.

"BE WHAT YOU IS"

"Bon't be what you ain't, but be what you is," was the inelegant but expressive theme of one of the delightful songs sung by Miss Kitty Cheatham the other night, and is struck me as being just the moto of Astrich's Fur Department, Fourth and Market streets, for in their large assortment of Christmas furs, where pelts of various kinds and qualities are shown, each is given its proper name and value, and customers may put perfect confidence in any statement made by this store in regard to furs. The Christmas gives are aputicularly desirable this year, and every piece is new in style and design. Though the scarcity of furs has made them high in price, everywhere the prices asked at Astrich's are quite moderate.

Lately I was amused, yet grieved, and I am hoping that the time will so sone come when mercenary thoughts will not enter into Christmas giving. Nothing is more expressive of a friendly Christmas spirit, free from the thought of cost, than the gifts of a book. At Cotterel's 9 N. Market Square, a wonderful collection of books for Christmas giving has been gathered together and whether one when mercenary thoughts will not enter into Christmas giving. Nothing is more expressive of a friendly Christmas spirit, free from the thought of cost, than the gifts of a book. At Cotterel's 9 N. All the "goodies" of Christmas time which are offered in such abundance at the Studebaker Grocery Store, (now owned by Mr. George Barnes) Second street at the crossing of State, lend themselves admirably to the decorative scheme of woodland tolorings which is suggested there. A Japanese basket in brown tones (which, by the way, are selling there for almost nothing) heaped with fruit, or one of the flat trays with graceful handle, filled with nuts, raisins, stuffed dates and dotted with candied cherries makes a bountiful centerpiece, while candles of deep golden color with the first basket, or in Christmas reds, or a warm deep prown with the second basket completes a most attractive Christmas

NOVEL AND SMART.

Strikingly original in design and patterned after the newest and smartest fashion, are the new dinner service plates just offered by the H. C. Claster Jewelry Shop. 302 Market street. The colorings are in the lovellest old blue and rose tints and the designs suggest some of the treasured plates seen in Dresden museums. Besides these, this shop offers a splendid assortment of dinner sets in simple designs, as well as the most elaborate patterns, in a wide range of prices. Indeed I was surprised at the moderate prices asked for everything in this beautiful store, but I find that is the policy of this new Claster Store, — to have beautiful and distinctive offerings at popular prices.

GIFTS FOR MEN

So many men who are given foolish presents are apt to feel that Christmas giving is a farce, and there is a strong tendency this year toward the most elaborate practical giving. Miss Hope Swengel, of 219 South Thirteenth street, and Miss Edith Hoover, of 100 Evergreen street, arrived in the city early this morning to spend the Christmas vacadon with their parents and friends. Both were former students at Wilson College, but are now at Syracuse University. They are both members of the Alpha Chi Omega fraternity and when in Syracuse are "at home" at the fraternity house, 123 College Place. Professor Harry U. Johns, for three Professor Harry U. cated in Lebanon, as a mechanical engineer.

Professor Johns is a Tech graduate in the class of 1908, and four years later finished a college course at State. After a year's employment at Steelton he accepted his present position at Tech. Mr. Johns is one of the most popular teachers in the Tech school, and his departure will be a source of regret to the Tech students and faculty.

Because of the preparations that are being made in the auditorium for the Christmas entertainment, chapel exercises were omitted this morning. The Tech Tatler made its appearance this afternoon clad in holiday attire. A design appropriate to the season was used on the cover. A page of cartoons by Paul Bratten was cleverly drawn, while Lester Zimmerman added an additional cartoon on the Thanksgiving contest. "Gill" Stewart, Stewart Blair and Vernon Hawbecker wrote three interesting stories for the number. The departments were well taken care of by the editors. The distribution was in charge of George Stark, editor, and Samuel Sherman, circulation manager.

test has been announced to be "John Marshall," This contest is for Senior boys only, and all essays must be submitted before January 15. The judges select the best four and each writer receives five dollars. The winners read their essays in chapel and the one reading his best receives an additional five dollars. The exercises in chapel will be held in the early part of February.

The Junior class of Central will hold a dance to-morrow evening in Hanshaw's hall. Members of all classes are invited.

Inquiries as to who wrote the "One Hundred Lines" in the December Argus are quite numerous. The poem is an excellent portrayal of the Central-Tech football game on Thanksiving. We learn from a fairly reliable source that its composer is Prof. John A. F. Hall of the faculty. School at Central will close to-morrow evening and reopen Tuesday morning, January 2. The sessions will change at this time, the morning students reporting in the afternoon and the afternoon students reporting at $1.55. All are urgently requested to remember this important fact. The afternoon session begins at 1:45. There will be no special Christmas exercises this year, this being due to lack of time and room.
