"Unto Us a Son Is Given" Text of Sunday School Lesson

he International Sunday School Lesson for December 24 is "Unto Us a Son Is Given."—Isa. 9:2-7. (By William T. Ellis)

It was in late January when my blizzard-belated kelek, or goat-skin raft, reached ancient Asshur, on the Tigris River, the one-time capitol of Assyria. Still the dining table of the genial German archaeologists was adorned with a Christmas tree, in a land where no Christmas greens grow. There was something pathetic as well as beautiful about that touch of home and childhood memories, the little tree that was as a bridge stretching between the Tigris and the Rhine. During that visit I saw the steles and other monuments of the oldest Assyrian monarchies, and heard read the boastful inscriptions of the kings who reigned thousands of years ago. Nevertheless, the wee, dried Christmas tree represented a greater and more significant sovereignty.

Two rulers and deliverers that are as one are symbolized by all the farflung preparations that are being made for the keeping of Christmas at this present moment — the child and the Christ who was Himself a child. Because of the peculiar conditions of the nations to-day, the study of this ancient fragment of Hebrew literature takes on a new pertinency. Now, as during the dark days of which Isalah wrote, our gleam of promise is in the picture of a child. Seven centuries before the birth of the Bethlehem Babe these words were written:

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even for ever." Assyria. Still the dining table of the genial German archaeologists

Fresh Water For Stale

One of the sad sights of a great city is the group of jaded elderly men to be seen loafing inside the plate-glass windows of fashionable clubs. They are more to be pitied than the ragged children playing in the streets, or the grimy toilers hastening to humble homes and the welcoming voices of their families. For these poor clubmen are there because they have nowhere else to go, and nothing to do. Most of them have money, but little else. Simple home joys, and the touch of baby hands, is not for them. They represent the world grown weary of itself. Not with them is the hope of the coming day. Children are the real deliverers, They are the fresh springs that cleanse life's old pools. Existence would grow stale and intolerable without the bubbling newness and vitality of childhood. Fresh from God, and free, the little ones come to do the great tasks of restoration. We have to look to the young for our deliverances, for the old are not free. The silken cords a convention and relationship and association have elderly reformers. Tradition and use alwould hold the sword of new service. Every person interested in social propour deliverances, for the day and the same time would hold the sword of new service.
