L. H. KINNARD'S XMAS SENTIMENT

Former Harrisburg Man Tells Editor How He Feels About the Great Holiday

The Christmas number of the Telephone News contains a Christmas chat with L. H. Kinnard, formerly of Harrisburg, now one of the big men of the telephone world at Philadelphia. The Telegraph lets the editor of the News tell it as he got it. Here it is: "It was the week before Christmas.

Just because we wanted to, and because we thought he might want us to, we turned the knob of Mr. Kinnard's door. We talked of Christmas. We told him what it meant to us, and asked what it meant to him. He told us; you too will want to hear. "You ask that I tell you what Christmas means to me personally. It is not an easy task; words that I can assemble paint but a crude picture of this, to me, most beautiful of all seasons. "The hard, the practical, in life has had its effect; in other things I have been disillusioned, but the Christmas of childhood, like the mother and father of childhood, remains unchanged, save as to the mellowing and sweetening that the years have brought. It is real, not mere tradition; it takes such a hold, grips so hard, that it hurts with the hurt of beautiful music. "A season for the young of all ages—when heart impulses dominate, when cold reason does not too much temper attitude, when we stop pretending hard-heartedness and indifference; a time for sentiment, tenderness, reverence for love, sympathy, friendship, good-will—when we come nearer to achieving universal brotherhood. "It has always seemed to be a season when no boy could be bad enough to justify Santa Claus in forgetting him. I revel in the forest of Christmas trees, the wreaths of holly and spruce, the lights, the tinsel, the blazing logs of the open fire, the Santa Claus trappings, the rattle of merriment, or, if you prefer, the racket of happiness. I always want it to snow, despite telephone calls, and I wish to hear the clatter of reindeer hoofs on the roof, if I could only see the stars and have no stockings to make. I hang up my stockings and, since the jolly old saint no longer brings me mechanical toys, hunt up a youngster who is more fortunate and is unselfish enough to share his treasure. "To me the stars of a frosty Christmas sky are different; all nature seems charged with carols; heaven and earth seem closer; come to mind shepherds who watched their flocks—a star of vivid brightness appeared—a stable stall—a baby was born. His cradle manger: 'twas but a peasant baby, but wise men traveled far to do homage and worship. It was the birthday of a strange King—one who desired to serve, not rule; whose power was love; whose influence for nineteen centuries has been only good. "The things we like about the Christmas story—the joy—the cheer—the sympathy, love and unselfishness—come from the heart. Doesn't Christmas prove that strong bodies and keen minds alone do not achieve the greatest successes—that a goodly portion of heart is needed?"

SNYDER SAYS HE WILL INVESTIGATE

Auditor General-Elect Makes Some Tart Statements; Sproul Flays the Governor

Auditor General-elect Charles A. Snyder, who intimated several times in the course of his visit to Harrisburg this week that he proposed asking a legislative inquiry into various matters connected with the departments of the State government, declared last night in Philadelphia that he would "turn on the light" himself. The Auditor General said that he would be investigating as soon as the Senate met and continue as long as he was in the Senate and that the rest of the work of inquiry would be carried on after he became Auditor General. Senator Snyder's statements were made coincident with a scathing denunciation of the course of the Brumbaugh administration in factional politics, which was even more severe than that made by Senator Penrose a few days ago and which was characterized by Governor Brumbaugh as a "fabrication."

Senator Snyder said: "I will give the present administration and everybody else all the publicity that is wanted. For one thing, I will see that a dozen or more political derelicts who are drawing pay from the State while living in Philadelphia and doing nothing in the way of service to the State are sent about their business if they have any. "Another thing—I purpose that every department, from the Governor's on down, shall account for every dollar of the State's money spent by them and accounted for monthly. It will be interesting to the people to learn how their money is wasted in the form of long distance telephone calls and telegrams by State officials who are strangers to the office. I shall also demand to know how telephone charges are run up by State officials playing the game of factional politics. The time is ripe for a house-cleaning on Capitol Hill and it will be for the good of the Republican party in this State.

"I do not want to be misunderstood. I am not going to turn on the light, but I am going to see that any Republican I appoint, or who is now in office, does a fair amount of work for the pay he draws from the State. It may prove to be a big job, but I'll put a lot of energy in it. What this State needs just now is less of the uplift-vision stuff and a lot more of the straight-forward business that kicks the incompetents, loafers and political mountebanks out of office and gives the taxpayer a run for his money.

"In my own good time I will give the voters an account into what the elegant, unbusinesslike methods that honeycomb some of the departments on Capitol Hill. I am not talking at random. I have investigated conditions, and, if the time were propitious, I could tell of at least 10 residents of Philadelphia who are on the State's payroll without doing a stroke of work in return. "Some humbug uplifters said during the campaign that I was unfit to fill the office of Auditor General, but the voters seemed to think otherwise, as they gave me an overwhelming vote obtained by any candidate. But putting aside the question of character and unfitness, I purpose to show what industry and honest regard for the common virtues will bring about."

The Sproul Charges
Senator Sproul's statement said: "Baldwin's candidacy has not been in State politics, but it is rapidly taking the shape of a protest against the prostitution of the executive departments of the Government to a base and factional purposes. I have been in the Senate for 20 years and am familiar with the political history of the State for a much longer period, and I have never known or heard of time when such practices as are now being used in the cause of 'sweetness and justice' in our public affairs were even considered. "The business of the great State is being practically paralyzed and the important departments utterly demoralized by the dragging of the officials and employes in order to bolster up the candidates into whom the Governor has again been thrust by those who have him in their charge. Threats, cajolery, promises and what are, in effect, bribes of positions are being used in all directions, and the administration is again floundering in a mire of scandal and disorganization.

Says Baldwin Will Be Fair
"The result of it all is a net gain for Baldwin which will become a walk-over when the caucus meets. Mr. Baldwin deserves the Speakership through a long and creditable record in the House and in the Senate. It is of that body has held the more continuous respect of his associates in a long career. An examination of his record will show that no man has more consistently favored measures of public benefit, especially those in which the interests of agriculture and labor were involved. "He is not a man to advocate half-baked theories, but he has killed more fool bills and kept off of the statute books more freak legislation than any man within my knowledge. He will be absolutely fair as Speaker, and no measures seriously considered need fear any influence of his will be used to prevent a full and free discussion.

Baldwin's Attitude
"The following letter which he has sent to United States Senator Oliver indicates Baldwin's viewpoint in matters of the kind: "I am a candidate for election as Speaker of the House of Representatives and write to ask your support. If elected Speaker I shall consider it my duty to see that all important measures are permitted to have full consideration on the floor of the House, and shall not use the influence of the office in any way to suppress measures. "I call your attention particularly to my views on the matter, because I know of your interest in the local option movement, and I should consider it my duty as Speaker to see that any local option measure has fair and impartial treatment and shall be reported from the committee for consideration of its merits on the floor of the House of Representatives. My opponents have publicly declared that local option is not involved in this controversy, and I feel, therefore, justified in appealing to all Republicans for their support."

COULDN'T STAND FOR THIS CHRISTMAS CAROL
Not approving of a Christmas carol a number of colored men were "rendering" in whisky tenor, John Jefferson, also colored, slashed two of the singers in a Steeple saloon yesterday afternoon. Jefferson came to Harrisburg and was about to board a train to Christmas abroad when he was arrested by Detective George Shuler.

CHARGED WITH LARCENY
Charged with the larceny of $14, Samuel Baker and Julia Jones were arrested at Seventh and Herr streets last evening. William Coleman was the complainant.

BEAT WIFE, CHARGE
William Davis, of 514 North street, was arrested last night by Policeman Cummings, charged with beating his wife.

The Season's Greetings From Bowman's

A Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year to All

The management of Bowman & Company takes this opportunity of wishing their many friends and patrons a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Safe in our physical isolation, happy in our prosperity, let us remember also that mockery of civilization—War—that is tearing in its grasp the innocent, the pure-hearted, God-fearing men, noble women, little children.

Millions of our fellowmen, sons of the forward-looking nations of the world, are fighting, suffering the torture, sacrificing literally everything that makes life worth living for what they believe to be the ideals of their own countries.

Answering the call of the individual conscience, thousands of Americans are risking their lives in the trenches—thousands of other devoted American men and women are toiling day and night, in a labor of love and pity, behind those ghastly battlefields.

And what of us who stay at Home?

Let our hearts and our practical aid go out to those in their dying moments, to those tending the wounded, comforting the desolate, sheltering the homeless, feeding the starving, clothing those who are naked—also at this psychological time may the prestige of our glorious country and the other neutral governments of the earth reach those in authority among the fighting nations—that peace may speedily come—and may it be a "lasting peace."

Is there any better Christmas sentiment than this? Can any act of mercy be more in keeping with the spirit and example of Him, whose birth we are about to celebrate in this great Festival of Unselfishness?

"Freely Ye Have Received, Freely Give"

In the sacred spirit of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men," you again have our best wishes for A Merry Yuletide.

$25,000 Will Not Cover Cost of Presents Sent to U. S. Soldiers in Mexico

Field Headquarters, Mexico, Dec. 23.—Twenty-five thousand dollars will not cover the cost of presents the people of the United States have sent to the soldiers of the punitive expedition, it was estimated today by the committee in charge of the Christmas celebration. Nothing of parsimony has been displayed by the senders. It was said that the value of more than ten thousand packages to be delivered is nearly three dollars each. Although a majority of the gifts have come from various Red Cross chapters, hundreds have come from individuals.

The six large tents where the packages are stored resemble department stores. Among the large consignments are forty-one thousand cigars, eleven thousand pounds of candy, three hundred pounds of smoking tobacco, six thousand comfort bases, two thousand Christmas packages, barrels of homemade jellies and two complete sets of baseball equipment. The list of contents of one shipment of comfort bases shows the usefulness of this class of Christmas remembrances. Each bag holds a complete "housewife," a package of tobacco with cigaret papers, writing paper and envelopes, dental floss, tooth brush and powder, pencil and shoe strings. Many of the packages come wrapped in handkerchiefs while one shipment was in the form

English Girl Brings Peace Letter From Russell to President Wilson

New York, Dec. 23.—A special committee of the American Neutral Conference committee left here early today for Washington to present to President Wilson a letter from Bertrand Russell, the noted British pacifist, lecturer and philosopher, appealing to the President to end the war in Europe. The committee consists of George Foster Peabody, Paul U. Kellogg and Miss Emily Greene Balch. The letter was brought to this country by an unnamed and otherwise unidentified messenger from England, a girl, in order to evade the British censor.
