THE PROPOSED TWO-CENT PIECE to resume the coining of two-cent pieces is a popular measure. It ought to be enacted without delay. There are many good reasons why the use of smaller coins should be en-couraged and there is a very particular need for a coin between the cent lar need for a coin between the cent and the nickel in value, and the two- petty squabbles. cent piece would cover the ground better than a three-cent piece.

Jedged to reduce the high cost of living and returned to office after having made no effort to fulfill those promises, the Wilson administration is apparently convinced that the people view its extravagances with pleasure and are ready cheerfully to assume any new burden put upon them. That is about the only conclusion to be drawn from the proposal of the Democrats at Washington to levy a special tax on coffee and tea in order that there may be no need to reduce the funds at the disposal of the Democratic Congress.

Tax on tea, coffee or any other article of such common table use is a tax direct upon the poor man, who is least able to bear it. Perhaps England, or France, or Germany in present circumstances, might be justified in levying such an assessment, but in the United States and the control of the control of the City Commissioner Gorgas, who is not every account of the proposal of the United States and seems the control of the City Commissioner Gorgas, who is not every account of the proposal of the United States and the control of the common table use is a tax direct upon the poor man, who is least able to bear it. While no date has been fixed for the return of the Eighth Infantry from duty along the Mexican border, it is generally believed that Colonel Finney's organization will be heading this way about the first ten days of February and will again resume its place in the organized militia of Pennsylvania. The chances are that the Eighth's units, like those of the First Cavalry, will be mustered out at home stations and the various companies will be sent to home stations, while the headquarters, machine gun, supply and head-quarters companies and the two line companies will detrain here and go to the armory. The companies to the west of the city will be dropped along the line and those in the Cumberland Valley and in Schuylkill county will be forwarded. The same will be done with the Fourth Infantry, which is to come home next month. The cavalry will be split up at Pittsburgh and the First Squadron will go on through to Philadelphia, the others being sent to be percentilled. ome stations.

One of the matters connected with the return of Troop C, or the Governor's Troop, as it will be known when it comes home, will be the care of the thirty-two horses which will be maintained here for the organization. These horses will be stabled under the direction of Captain George C. Jack and the government will pay the hostlers, so that there will be horses available for the men to ride at all times and in event of mobilization the men will have mounts for a start. The machine gun company of the Eighth and the wagon company will have some horses for training purposes. In fact, the local companies will be closer to a war footing than ever known before.

As it is probable that the next Legislature will be asked to make some substantial appropriations for armories and other arrangements in behalf of the National Guard, it is interesting to note that one state which has two regiments spent $70,000 in preparing its camp, while another spent over $200,000. The State of Pennsylvania owns something close to 2,000 acres at Mount Gretina, where its permanent camp is located, and its investment, less than $50,000, is in marked contrast when one considers the efficiency of the Keystone State troops.

The State Highway Department's automobile division is the big money maker on Capitol Hill just now, as it is doing a business of $100,000 a day. In all probability the total revenue for 1916 licenses will run over $2,225,000. At the present rate the 1917 revenue will exceed it and then some thousands.

Representative Miles A. Milliron, of Kittanning. is here combining business, politics and pleasure, as he is a legislator and also connected with school supply concerns. He has been attending the educational association meetings and visiting the headquarters and the Capitol.
