Talk INTO Your Telephone

First: The operator's pleasant "Number please?"

Second: Give the number deliberately, clearly, distinctly.

Third: Talk directly into the transmitter with your lips close to it, giving your whole attention to the conversation.

That looks easy:

It is easy, and that little care in speaking into the telephone will help make telephoning more pleasant, the steps of your call surer, and the service more satisfactory to yourself and those you call.

"After War Preparedness Up to You, Not Uncle Sam," Redfield Tells Business

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.—Business preparedness in the United States is not so much the concern of the government as it is of business itself. Secretary of Commerce Redfield told the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce to-day. The American government, he said, already is doing more than that of any other nation to aid business. "Preparation for conditions to be expected after the war," continued Secretary Redfield, "is not in its most effective form something that the government can do. An official can at most from his broad outlook over the industrial field suggest the presence of lines needing correction or alteration. Law is not so much needed to prepare us for the 'after the war' as action, and the action is that which individual concerns can take in handling their own affairs as the war goes on. It is up to us to prepare to resume, so the way to prepare is to prepare—not by having somebody else do it for us, but by doing it ourselves. It is rather a matter of individual and corporate responsibility than of governmental action."
