THE WORLD'S BOOK OF 1917

Pre-eminent in the Matter of Meeting Reference Demands of Every Kind

Kind

The year 1916 was one of important records in war abroad and in peace, industry and legislative progress at home. Among students, teachers, newspapermen and general readers there will be daily and some times almost hourly occasions for reference to the dates of events, the text of new laws or other documents, the statistics of trades, flavence are lections.

documents, the statistics of trades, finance or elections.

This surpassing importance of the twelvemonth just past places a fresh accent upon the fast well established under tests of other years, that The World Almanac and Encyclopedia is the American publication pre-eminent in the american publication pre-eminent in the first second of meeting reference demands of every kind. In the 1917 issue of nearly 1,209 pages, this annual presents the last word of the calendar hour for the first and last of its uncounted consultants. It runs the ravage of events from pugilism to president-making, from pugilism to president-making, from pugilism to president-making, from pugilism to president-making. In the pages given to war are a chronological table of battle events abroad, the Kaiser's peace proposal, President Wilson's note to the belligerents, a list of peace societies and movements and texts of our own army bill, details of American preparedness plans, texts of peace treaties, and contributions to relief funds.

The new United States general revenue law, including income tax changes, is printed in full.

WEST SHORE NEWS GILLILAN SPILLS LECTURE SECRET

Towns Along West Shore Tells Telegraph Reporter How Humorists Keep Soft Clothes From Wrinkling

Gillian was in town again yesterday—Strickland W. Gillian, the man who made the word Finnigan a household one. Jumping into Baltimore at 3 this morning from Sumpter, S. C., he snatched himself five hours sleep at home and then headed for Pittsburgh, through Harrisburg. To-night he talks at the Hotel Schenley.

"Mr. Gillilan," said a Telegraph reporter at the station this noon, "Tell me this: How do you keep your soft clothes from wrinkling, when you carry them all jammed up in a suitcase the way you do? Seems to me they'd look like——."

"Never mind mentioning the name of the place," replied Gillilan. "Young man, I am going to tip you off to a secret that until to-day has been the exclusive possession of the members of the Ancient Order of Humorous Platform Talkers. When you get to your hotel take your dress suit to the bathroom, put it on the hanger, turn on the hot water in the tub, go out and close the door. The steam will soften the clothes and the wrinkles will vanish."

"But what if the hot water is like the usual hotel hot water—luke warm or cold?" asked the reporter.

"In that case you wear your suit wrinkled," was the reply.

the usual hotel hot water—luke warm or cold?" asked the reporter.

"In that case you wear your suit wrinkled," was the reply.

The reporter was feeling so much at home by this time that he ventured to tell Gillilan the latest (in Harrisburg) stuttering story and actually got a laugh—not the laugh. He felt encouraged. Telling the average platform humorist a funny story is a dangerous proceeding. The average humorist will remark, after listening to a droll tale, that the first time he heard it he nearly kicked the slats out of his crib, etc. Gillilan, as told, laughed at the story of the stuttering man who asked the cigar girl for a few matches. Then he said that "Jim" Travers, a Baltimore stutterer, went to New York to live. When he got back to Baltimore, after a time, a friend said:

"Jim,' you stutter worse than ever since you went to New York."
"It's a b-b-b-bigger t-t-t-town," said Travers.

"Talking about repar-tee," said the

"Jim,' you stutter worse than ever since you went to New York."
"It's a b-b-b-bigger t-t-t-town," said Travers.
"Talking about repar-tee," said the reporter, "I heard a lot of the real thing at the Rotary club meeting last night."
"It's great stuff—repartay," remarked Gillilan. "It's appreciated most by the folks who can't. That's the way with almost everything. I had a strange thing brought home to me once at a prize fight in Lose Anghalaise—"
"Beg pardon," said the reporter.
"That's Californian for Los Angeles," smiled Gillilan. "At a prize fight in that city I noticed the great number of cripples in the crowd. There were men with withered arms and withered legs. There were hunchbacks. There were one-armed men and one-legged men. The audince was full of them. Do you know those unfortunates fairly lived that fight. For the time being they, too, were strong and lusty models of manhood, like the men in the ring."
"And I suppose they all applauded with both feet."
"You're right," declared Gillilan. "Even the one-legged men thought they were using both feet. Feet are a great thing. How in the world would we warm our shoes in the morning if we didn't have feet? They're the greatest possible terminal points for legs, don't you think? What would our legs look like, anyway, with a hand down there, or a face When you think it over feet are everything."

The reporter went down for the tird time.

thing."
The reporter went down for the third time.

third time.

Gillilan caught the 12:25 train west. Folks in Lewistown, Huntingdon, Tyrone, Johnstown and Greensburg who heard a strange tap-tap as the train whizzed through did not know that Strickland Gillilan was Corona-ing his way into a few more newspapers. But he was. Of course, the well-known humorist didn't forget to call up the William Penn Highway offices before he fast-mailed west, but unfortunately didn's connect with the secretary.
