Bloody Face at Window Reveals Dual Murder; Two Others Stabbed

Eric, Pa., Jan. 19. — An attempted triple murder was revealed yesterday when neighbors forced their way into the home of Mrs. John Turrano, 214 Wallace street, and found Mrs. Turrano dead, Thomas Mundeau, a boarder, dying, and a three-year-old daughter of Mrs. Turrano dazed from a blow on the head.

Mrs. Turrano, aged 38 years, was strangled to death. Her body was a mass of knife wounds. Mundeau was stabbed in a dozen places and an ice pick was sticking in the back of his neck when he was discovered.

The bloody face of Mundeau as he dragged himself to the window of the Turrano home attracted neighbors, who investigated.

Mundeau was committed after two other children of Mrs. Turrano had gone to school. No clue has been found.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell. The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. The ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

The Honeymoon House

By Hazel Dale

Janet Inspects the Many Gifts and Marvels at Their Beauty

Janet stood in the middle of the wonderful studio apartment that she and Jarvis had discovered. She wore a big apron over her dress, and she was trying to bring order out of chaos. About her in varying degrees of disorder stood her things. The beautiful every bedroom suite had not arrived, as Jarvis and Janet were not sleeping in the house by any means. They were only spending their honeymoon in a novel manner, that is, in doing what they liked.

Most of Janet's wicker things had been put into the bedroom, but the things that had come up from the other studio were in the big room. A woman was working at the windows, and as fast as Janet could unpack a thing the papers and strings were hastily disposed of by the obliging janitor who evidently thought the occupants of the top floor studio very strange and wonderful beings.

Jarvis came in suddenly and found her among the half-opened packages. He almost staggered under the weight of armful of boxes. Janet gave a little scream of delight.

"Jarvis, did you ever see anything like it?" she said delightedly. "Why people have sent things just as though we had had a big wedding. Here's something from the Daskells. I never even sent them an announcement." "Let's open this one right away," Jarvis suggested, and Janet seized the big registered bundle eagerly. It was from Jarvis's one relative who never did anything for him, an aunt, who lived in California, and she was naturally anxious to see what it contained. Janet pulled the heavy wrappings off quickly, and beneath them was a huge wicker chest.

Janet looked up at Jarvis suddenly. "Dear, I have a premonition that it is going to be something wonderful. I wonder what it is, and thinking what I am." And then they raised the lid. Janet gasped.

"Imagine owning silver like this and living in a studio apartment," she breathed. "Did you know I had an idea that Aunt Grace would send it. Just look, a dozen of everything. Why, we shall live like kings, Jarvis. No one could own anything nicer."

"What shall we open next?" Jarvis said eagerly. "This is just like having a wishing lamp. Let's tackle this big box over here; we'll get the large things out of the way first, and then we can gradually get to rights."

The large box required a hammer and plenty of lard wool to get open. It was marked "Handle with care," and Janet could not help but notice that it contained, although it ought to be something nice, for her father's brother had sent it. The big wooden chest was lifted off and Janet dove down into the excruciatingly wrapped up something wrapped with paper.

"It feels like a cup," she said ecstatically. "Jarvis, I know what it is—silver!"

She unwrapped the cup carefully. In a way she was happy, but in another way she was almost afraid to look. Suppose it was a design unthought of by just any old thing, suppose Uncle Ned had sent a dinner set banded in gold! That would be a catastrophe. And then she looked up at Jarvis.

"Isn't it adorable," she said with shining eyes. "Oh, look, Jarvis, here's an envelope. From Uncle Ned and Aunt Grace, I suppose."

That this queer design will please our young Bohemian relatives."

The design was of the kind used in tearooms. Queer birds and flowers were scattered over it promiscuously. Janet had seen a set like it in a Fifth Avenue shop and had sighed longingly, for she knew that Aunt Ned had sent it. She had set aside to buy things with would not be nearly enough to pay for them. And here they were.

"At this rate, we shan't have to buy anything but kitchen utensils," Jarvis said, as they went on unpacking and gradually disclosed a silver meat platter, a silver cake plate, a queer old brass coffee pot, a silver chafing dish and countless other smaller articles of the kind generally presented to brides.

There were two large packages down stairs, Jarvis said finally, when they had unwrapped the last one. "Jack said he would bring them up as soon as he could get some one to help him. Suppose you go down; we might as well have them."

Ten minutes later two more queer looking packages were being rapidly divested of their outer garments. "Wonder what this thing is," Janet said, and then, "Oh, it's a chaise longue done in ivory, and what wonderful hints. Do you suppose we could match it for curtains? And what's this? Jarvis, it's never a rug."

But it was a rug, a gorgeous, rich-toned thing, in blue and yellow. It would look regal in the studio. "I'm so happy I could cry," Janet said, looking up to meet Jarvis's eyes. "But, to tell the truth," she finished naively, "I haven't the time. Come on, boy, let's get to work and clean up." (To Be Continued.)

Spurned Suitor Is Held When Two Are Slain

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 19. — Miss Nellie A. Wheeler, school teacher, was shot and killed in the Wheeler school here yesterday. Her suitor, Rowland D. Williams, a vocal instructor, was shot and killed in his studio. The police are holding John M. Couch, brother-in-law of Miss Dunn, on an old charge. Miss Lucile Leslie, another teacher, sat in the room where the shooting took place over his face and walk into Miss Dunn's room. As she passed the door she saw him talking to Miss Dunn. "She had her hands clasped and looked at me in the most appealing way," Miss Leslie said. "I went into the room I saw Miss Dunn run out of her room into the hallway and the man was running alongside, then I heard a shot." Soon after, Williams, left his studio at noon, dressed in a suit, and was shot, followed by the sound of footsteps down the stairway. Acquaintances of Miss Dunn said she and Williams had been close friends for more than a year. Mrs. Mary C. Couch, sister of Miss Dunn, is a devoted nurse for several years Couch had attempted to force his attentions on her sister, but that Miss Dunn spurned him.

We Thank You!

Since the "Cut-Over" from the out-of-date, inefficient manual to the ultra-modern Automatic Telephone system, we have been receiving contracts at the rate of from 35 to 50 a day.

Like many other business concerns, through inability to get materials fast enough to fill inpouring orders, we have been held up with the installation of many telephones.

By straining every effort—and by a stroke of exceptional good luck—we have been able to get needed equipment rushed to us far ahead of our turn from the Automatic Electric Company factory in Chicago. We are now prepared to install telephones as fast as human energy can do the work.

You have been very patient with the delay made necessary by lack of materials, and we wish to take this means of publicly thanking you.

Anarchistic Organization Is Accused of Threat to Take Life of President

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 19. — That President Wilson's life was threatened by an anarchistic organization known as "The Blasters," of which Thomas J. Mooney, on trial here in connection with the bomb murders, was a leader, will show by evidence to be presented in Mooney's trial, Assistant District Attorney Edwin A. Cunha declared in Superior Court in his opening address to the jury. "I will prove," said Cunha, "that these men plotted revolution against the Government. I will prove that they said in an edition of 'The Blast,' 'The weathercock in the White House had better watch out. Suppression of the voice discontent leads to assassination.' Cunha outlined the history of the bomb explosion here last July, in which ten persons lost their lives and in which it is charged Mooney had a part.

Offers Solution to Thin People

Says Three-Grain Hypo-Nuclane Tablets Increases Weight Steadily.

New Theory of Nutrition Brings Revolution to Anaemic Folks.

A scientist evolved a theory and proceeded to demonstrate it to be fact. The theory involved nutritive processes for thin, bloodless, nervous, anaemic people. The red corpuscles of the blood must be increased before weight or flesh can be formed on "skinny" folks. A salt extract from the yolk of eggs, combined with hypophosphites, iron, and simple vegetable tonics, actually solved the problem. The process is intricate, but the results are purely beneficial. These little tablets taken with your meals, aid digestion, increase nutrition and force new blood and tissue building materials into the nutritive channels with a consequent increased absorption and retention for building flesh. They do it, these tablets, but weigh before beginning and one or two packages will convince the most skeptical. Sold by druggists at 90 cts., or direct from the Laboratories of the Blackburn Products, Co., Dayton, Ohio.
