The Rev. Rufus W. Miller says: "I hail with joy the establishment of the children's endowment fund of $100,000, because it is not only a most fitting memorial for the four hundredth anniversary of the Reformation, but it is also the right kind of preparation on the part of the church to meet the religious needs of the children."

Half Auto and Half Sleigh Solves Problem of Running Through Snow

AUTO-SLEIGH

Virtue White, of West Ossipee, N. H., devised this scheme to overcome the difficulties of traveling through the deep snows of New Hampshire. The front wheels of the auto were removed and placed under the body of the car just in front of the rear wheels and the two sets of wheels were then connected by antiskid chains. This prevents slipping and gives a greater driving surface. In places where the front or steering wheels, a set of runners were provided. Mr. White has attained a speed of twenty-four miles an hour with his novel vehicle.

Profits in Poultry

Because of the few figures available on profits in poultry for Pennsylvania, data on this subject is in demand. It is the idea of the Pennsylvania poultry profits from farms in the state that H. C. Kandel, in charge of poultry expansion at the Pennsylvania State College, recently secured records from 62 farms representing 24 counties. These records were divided into five groups or classes. The first class includes farmers reporting 100 laying hens or less; the second class, those reporting 100 or 200 hens; the third class, 200 to 500; the fourth class, 500 to 1,100, and the fifth class, 1,100 to 4,000.

For the first group the average annual profit per bird was $1.17; for the second group, $1.54; for the third group, $1.70; for the fourth, $1.87, and for the fifth, 88 cents. Those three, therefore, showed the highest annual profit per bird. The farms reporting in this group were general farms, on which two to five hundred head of poultry are kept, while in the case of group four, where poultry was nearly as much per bird, the farmers were specializing in poultry. In other words, where poultry was kept only as a side line profits were larger than in the case of group four, where poultry was the "cash crop."

The survey vindicates the original opinion of those who took it, that is, that from 200 to 500 birds is the most profitable number to keep on general farms in Pennsylvania. Experience contributes to the judgment of the college authorities that unless adequate help is available the number of poultry kept should be reduced to insure maximum profits.

The figures given represent a good average, coming as they do from general and specialized poultry farms.

ORDER FARM SUPPLIES EARLY

The present freight congestion and car shortage on the railroads over the country leads authorities at the Pennsylvania State College school of agriculture and experiment station to emphasize the necessity of ordering farm supplies for the coming season at an early date. If the present congestion continues, farmers may find themselves confronted with a serious situation in the form of belated shipments of fertilizers, implements, seeds and other supplies at the time when these commodities are most needed in the spring. A little planning and foresight immediately exercised may save considerable worry and delay later.

WIFE-PLUS-WINE COMBINATION IS CAUSE OF ARREST

Counterfeiters in Jail Because Woman's Tongue Wagged Too Freely

The slip of woman's tongue, it was learned to-day, was responsible for the rounding up of the Ferry-Hornberger-Balmer band of counterfeiters.

The tip leading to the constant shadowing of Alvin M. Hornberger, the man who "made" the money in the South Cameron street garage, was obtained following a "joy ride" from Reading to Harrisburg in which a wife of one of the counterfeiters was a party. Whether it was Mrs. Hornberger or Mrs. Balmer, or either, the detectives have not said. That it was not Mrs. Joseph D. Ferry, wife of the local garage man, is conceded. She has not been living with her husband for four years.

Bit Too Hilarious While in a state of hilarity, superinduced by a bit too much wine, the counterfeiters' wife is said to have confided to a friend in a local drinking room that she knew where lots of counterfeit money was stored.

Captain Matthew J. Griffin, head of the United States Secret Service in Philadelphia, who, with other government officials, ran down the case, declared that for this tip the Federal authorities would have discontinued their investigation. They had been following Hornberger from the time of his acquittal in Philadelphia and they had never been able to get anything on him.

Apparently he was treading the straight and narrow path and he was acting as auctioneer and working in a store. The authorities were about to throw up the game when, during a visit to Harrisburg in connection with his shadowing of the Reading man, the information which has been given out by the woman was carried to Captain Griffin.

Hornberger Under Fire The captain went to Reading and consulted Detective McGovern and from that time on Hornberger never made a move that was unknown to the detectives. As many as a dozen sleuths were on his trail at a time and his house was visited often by agents who were in reality government operatives. Finally Hornberger is alleged to have confessed and to have furnished the government with evidence.

Hornberger is secretary of the Berks County Democratic Association, which recently endorsed a candidate for postmaster at Pottsville.

Mrs. Hornberger, wife of one of the prisoners, is ill at her home here as a result of the exposures following her husband's arrest.

The center of the interest in the operations of the alleged counterfeiters has shifted to Mohnton, Hornberger's home town. Several persons there are under surveillance. It is alleged that considerable counterfeit money has been passed in that vicinity recently.

The hearing of Hornberger and Ferry will be held Monday afternoon before United States Commissioner LeRoy J. Wolfe.

Ignorance of Timber Values Causes Big Woodlot Losses

It is a fact that the annual loss to the farmers of the United States from incautiousness in disposing of their timber runs into millions of dollars. In the main this loss is due to their unfamiliarity with the timber business and timber values. The following cases cited by a member of the forestry staff of the Pennsylvania State College school of agriculture and experiment station are only a few of many on record:

Case 1. A Pennsylvania farmer was offered $700 for his woodlot. The offer was refused. Some months later another buyer offered him $1,200. The owner decided to hold his timber. In a few months a third buyer offered $1,700. The last figure was a fair offer for the timber.

Case 2. A Maryland owner was offered $1,500. The timber was estimated and advertised, restrictions being placed on the cutting of young timber. The buyer who made the first approach offered $4,500. The timber was finally sold for $3,500.

Case 3. A New England farmer sold timber for $1,200. His neighbor sold approximately the same quantity of equally valuable material to the same portable sawmill owner for $7,000. The first man knew nothing about timber values; the second man was well informed.

Comment appears unnecessary except to say that the conclusion should not be drawn that all woodlot owners are taken advantage of to a material extent by the sawmill owners with whom they deal. The buyer can hardly be censured for desiring to buy cheaply as possible. The woodlot owner himself buys likewise. Greater attention to the woodlot means more money for the owner.

Bethlehem's Bid on Shells for the United States Navy

To the American People: The Secretary of the Navy has awarded contracts amounting to over $3,000,000 to a British bidder for 14 and 16-inch projectiles for the Navy, for the reason that the British firm offered prices very much below those of American manufacturers, including ourselves.

We know nothing of the basis upon which the British bids were made, but the public is entitled to know the facts upon which we ourselves bid for this work.

Two years ago we took contracts to make 4,200 14-inch shells at a price of $1,515,000 (with heavy penalties for delayed delivery). Despite the fact that all our experience and facilities have been strained to fulfill these contracts, up to now not a single shell has been accepted by the Government, although, on the work already done

We have expended in wages, materials, etc. $447,881 Expended in making tests for the Government 75,000 Making our total actual expenditure up to date $522,881

And we have not received a SINGLE DOLLAR on these contracts In addition literal enforcement of the contract might involve payment of penalties for delayed delivery already amounting to $678,016.

Navy Department tests are now so severe that neither we nor, so far as we know, any other manufacturers have yet been able to produce in quantity 14-inch shells which will meet them. In the light of our experience, and having no other basis, we bid for 16-inch shells approximately the same rate per pound as that upon which the Navy Department actually awarded a 14-inch shell contract one year ago.
