

Alkali Makes Soap Bad For Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

APPOINT VIEWERS ON BRIDGE PLANS

Will Pass on Improvements at Killinger, Sand Beach and Linesville

Viewers were appointed this morning by President Judge George Kunkel, upon the petition of the County Commissioners, presented by County Solicitor Philip Moyer, to determine the necessity for rebuilding three bridges in various parts of the county.

The bridges to be rebuilt are: One over Little Wiconisco creek, near Killinger, Upper Paxton township; one over Mandana creek, at Sand Beach, South Hanover township, and a third over Swatara creek at Linesville, between East Hanover and Derry townships.

Viewers were appointed as follows: Little Wiconisco creek bridge, Paul G. Smith, Joseph W. Umberger and Harry Fahnestock; Mandana creek bridge, Mr. Smith, William Look and Earl E. Graeff; Swatara creek bridge, Mr. Smith, Mr. Look and E. Clark Cowden.

Transfer License—President Judge Kunkel to-day granted the transfer of the liquor license of the Dauphin Hotel to Mrs. Jane Sellers, widow of Charles W. Sellers, proprietor of the hotel for many years. Mr. Sellers' funeral was held on Saturday.

Appoint Appraisers.—Samuel H. Reed and Harry E. Snyder, of Hummelstown, were appointed by President Judge Kunkel as appraisers of $300 worth of personal property owned by Mrs. Sarah Reigle, of Hummelstown, widow of Samuel Reigle.

Judge McCarroll Ill.—The illness of Additional Law Judge S. J. McCarroll, President Judge Charles V. Henry of Lebanon, presided at criminal court sessions in Court Room No. 2. Judge McCarroll is suffering from a slight cold and remained at home upon the advice of physicians.

THE CAPITOL'S ARCHITECTURE You drop down into a tunnel in the basement of the House Building and proceed through that tunnel into the cellar of the Capitol, and there, taking the direct air-line route for the office, you turn to the right and walk along a corridor for quite a while and then turn to the right again and walk along another corridor for quite a while and enter it and rise to the next level and turn to the left and walk along a corridor till you perspire gently and turn to the right and walk along a corridor till you get your second wind and find yourself in a tropical jungle of massive squat pillars through which you pick your way in a generally leftwardly direction and at last emerge and descend a few steps and then descend a large number of steps and then descend a few steps more and march perseveringly along a corridor and turn briskly to the left and bound up a flight of beautifully designed steps and swerve sharply to the right and stagger down a flight of stairways ingeniously executed steps into a dark hole in which there are wooden partitions, and there you are! That's Gardner's office.

All that the Capitol needs is to get rid of the elevators and install a battery of sure-footed mountain brros. —From William Hard's description of Augustus Peabody Gardner (6th Mass. Congr. Dist.), in Collier's for February 3rd.

Cought a Cold and Couldn't Shake It Took All the Pep Out of Him and Medicines Couldn't Seem to Budge It TANLAC DROVE IT OUT

"My job takes me out in all kinds of weather," says Fred Rogers, a delivery wagon driver, who lives on North Seventh street, Harrisburg, Pa. "Now there's not a sign of the cold and I feel bully. Got plenty of ambition, enjoy my work and when it comes to appetite, my horse has got nothing on me. Tanlac is great stuff! you can tell everybody I said so."

Tanlac, the famous reconstructive tonic, is now being introduced here at "Grogan's" Drug Store, where the Tanlac man is meeting the people and explaining the merits of this master medicine.

NATION READY FOR WAR FOOTING

Fleet to Remain on Alert at Guantanamo to Strike at Moment's Notice

WILSON SEES CHIEFS

Mobilization Orders Are Ready For Regular Army and National Guard

Washington, Feb. 5.—The country is prepared to go on a war footing to-day.

Immediately on returning from the Capitol President Wilson summoned Secretary of War Baker and Secretary of the Navy Daniels to the White House. He desired to take up the matter of necessary precautionary military measures without delay.

The conference lasted about half an hour and bristled with decisions suggested by the two secretaries and endorsed forthwith by the President. Admiral Mayo, commanding the battleship fleet, is to hold his vessels in readiness at Guantanamo and see that everything is shipshape aboard all the vessels under his direct command.

Mobilization Orders Ready Mobilization orders for the regular army and National Guard are ready and await only the word from the President to be put into effect.

Without additional authority from Congress President Wilson can direct that the regular army be increased at once to its full war strength of 288,000 men and its navy to $7,000. There are in the National Guard about 150,000 men. The full strength of the guard, 440,000, cannot be required under existing law within four years.

The regular army now numbers about 120,000 and would not be recruited to full strength except on order of the President in an emergency "of threatened war."

The President and Mr. Keat, discussed the most expeditious means of bringing the country to a war footing in the shortest possible time the moment hostilities with Germany became a certainty.

The War Department's mobilization plan, drawn up by the General Staff, is regarded as fitting any initial trouble. It will be used also as the basis for the establishment and equipment of a new army which the President contemplates will be speedily put into shape if war confronts the country.

The tentative plans discussed revolved about the actual mobilization and the creation of the new forces. Orders were sent out to every fort, arsenal and depot of military supplies to redouble the guard against any purrises attempt to damage them, but the main feature of the conference concerned the plans for really putting the country on a war footing.

So far as the mapped out mobilization is concerned, it is probable that during the coming months at the National Guardsmen, after being mustered into federal service, would remain at armories or in camp. Training would be the watershed.

The plan for raising an army is being considered on the basis of the War Department's universal service bill. Major-General Scott, chief of staff, and army officers generally regard this as affording the most practical means of providing a nucleus for an efficient force and Secretary Baker has endorsed this view.

This plan, the details of which have been withheld from the public, would provide for the raising of approximately 600,000 men by calling to the colors all fit citizens of the age of 18, for example. It is estimated that there are approximately 1,000,000 of this age. Discounting those who would prove physically unfit or for other reasons would be rejected, and also discounting those who might be assigned to duty in munition factories, etc., there would remain, roughly, 600,000 men for intensive training which the War Department would require.

By this scale the War Department calculates it could provide another 500,000 men by calling to colors men of the age of 20 and another 500,000 at the age of 21. Thus 1,500,000 men could be called out by confining the age limit from 18 to 21. The policy of the department is to take first the men who would have the least responsibilities.

Intensive training would equip raw recruits for war service in approximately nine months, it is estimated. This was the conclusion reached by Great Britain after the actual experience of training men in the present war.

Use of the Navy The War and Navy Departments were full of gossip to-day as to what steps lay beyond the severance of relations. The question of the use which might be made of the navy occupied most attention as one that would have immediate bearing. Navy officials would not say what plans were in contemplation, whether American merchant craft would be converted, patrols against submarines, or the use of the navy in submarine chasing squadrons organized.

So far the fleet is concerned, officials appeared to agree that its present situation was most desirable, even if war is to come immediately. It is highly improbable that any element of the great organized fighting unit of the navy would be employed in convoy or other duty that would scatter its elements. Presumably navy practice would follow that of other countries in the event of war and the fleet be kept at some secret mobilization point, ready to strike in any direction in which fighting strength might be needed.

Officers who have been urging universal service legislation are hopeful that the bill prepared by the General Staff for this purpose would be promptly enacted should war come and the organization of the army proceed along the lines it lays down. Details of the bill will not be disclosed until it has been completed and submitted to Secretary Baker and Congress.

Offers From Plants Secretary Daniels is understood to have informed the President that a deluge of patriotic offers already had been telegraphed to him from firms throughout the country offering to make every sacrifice to equip speedily the navy for any emergency.

Shipbuilders, steel manufacturers, projectile and armor plate concerns all came to the front in a wave of patriotism to offer the best and quickest service they can provide. Munitions for the Entente and other European war orders will be held up if the United States regards it more important for energy to be devoted toward supplies for the United States.

E. G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, was one of the first to offer the facilities of his corporation without restriction to the government. He called Mr. Daniels up
