Flat rejection by the United States of Germany's proposal to discuss international differences without first halting the illegal submarine campaign left one other suggestion of the Berlin government still pending at the State Department to-day. That was to reaffirm the Prussian-American treaties of 1799 and 1828, relating mainly to treatment of enemy residents in war times, with a number of new provisions which apparently would constitute almost a new treaty. It seemed quite probable that this proposal, the same as that submitted to Ambassador Gerard at Berlin after he had asked for his passports and which he declined to consider, will be frowned upon also. Both offers were submitted to the State Department through the Swiss minister, acting on behalf of Germany.

To Ask Release of Prisoners

A report probably will be made soon through the same channel that no German merchant ships have been selzed in American ports and no German sailors have been imprisoned. The government then will look for immediate release of the seventy-two American sailors captured from British ships in the Atlantic by a German raider and now held prisoners in Germany. The State Department was notified yesterday that they were still held, pending receipt of information on the German crews of this country. President Wilson had under consideration to-day the question whether the Navy Department shall furnish guns to arm American merchant ships, as it is understood the State Department has recommended.

While the military activities along the Franco-Belgian front, where the British are fighting their way toward Bapaume, have slackened somewhat, there has been an increase in the importance of the operations in several of the other war areas.

From the Tigris front in Asia there comes the official report of an important British success. The British have established a line more than three miles long across the bend of the Tigris west of Kut-El-Amara, the operation resulting in the Turks there being completely hemmed in, it is declared.

SPROUL RESOLUTION IS HOTLY DEBATED

The House then took up the debate on the resolution as a whole.

When the resolution came up Mr. Sarig, Berks, promptly introduced a series of amendments providing the same plan of investigation by a commission which was ruled out as unconstitutional in the Senate last Monday, Mr. Sarig is the Democratic floor leader, and the proposed amendments were drafted by the Democratic legislative committee. Most of the Senators and many spectators were present when the measure came up.

Mr. Sarig addressed the House at length on his amendments, saying the Democrats believed they would meet all objections made to the original plan by the Governor and others as unfair.

"I want to call the bluff about this resolution for investigation. If the two Republican factions want a fair investigation as they claim they do let them vote for these amendments, said he. "We have spent enough time on this resolution. The people back home want the fact that are behind all this fuss." Mr. Sarig said the people are tired of the petty politics being played and that they want an investigation that will be thorough.

Irrespective of what the Governor or anyone else wants, said Mr. Beyer, of Philadelphia, the proposition of the Democrats is out of order because, he held, the Legislature cannot delegate powers of investigation to any other body.

Mr. Walton, Franklin, objected that want and the proposition of the perty poly.

Mr. Williams said in the case of the Mr. Williams said in the case of the Capital commission an extension of time was granted, and it should be arranged that the Legislature should not be delayed by this probe. Those who are urging the resolution, he said, had not taken the House into their confidence.
