George W. Perkins

High Cost of Living Investigating Commission. Curiously enough none of the gruesome facts uncovered by Commissioner of Accounts Leonard M. Wallstein has been acted upon either by the Wicks committee or the Perkins committee. Although the flames of hell burned fiercely enough the waters of political expediency again proved themselves sufficiently potent to quench them. So with all fires kindled in the name of public health where the fagots that feed the flames are regarded in official places as privileged interest that it would be better not to meddle with.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

AMAZING BUT RARELY SUSPECTED TRUTHS ABOUT THE THINGS YOU EAT

By ALFRED W. McCANN

The Purchase of Nine Hindquarters of Diseased Old Cows Bearing the "Inspected and Passed" Stamp Provoked a Situation Which Contrasted With the Reactionary Activities of the People's Representatives, Discloses Much of the Dangers by Which Self-Government is Confronted When the Things to Be Governed Are Deliberately Hidden From the Eyes of the Governors.

Following my purchase of nine hindquarters of diseased old cows, bearing the New York City Health Department "inspected and passed" stamp, Lucius P. Brown, director of the Bureau of Food and Drug inspection, commenced to realize the desperate nature of the situation which confronted him.

During a period of sudden activity lasting ten days he located, on his own account, twelve more hindquarters of diseased old cows in the butcher shops of New York City, each a piece of meat bearing the "inspected and passed" stamp of his department. The difference between the results of activity and inactivity was beginning to make itself felt at last.

In the midst of these disclosures I caught one of the slaughterer's agents in the act of selling four hindquarters of tubercular meat. The circumstances surrounding his offense were so incriminating that he decided the best way to escape the consequences of his act would be to tell all he knew.

He confessed that a grant fund existed in the slaughtering establishments for the payment of Health Department officials. He said he had frequently seen the drivers of the slaughterers stamp the carcasses of diseased cows with the Health Department seal given to them for that purpose by Health Department officials.

Confessing that he had been mixed up in the distribution of hundreds of diseased carcasses, he described how the forequarters were heated and put away in cold storage to be disposed of under favorable market conditions, to bologna and frankfurter manufacturers.

"The Health Department," he said, "keeps the slaughterers informed of the movements of out-of-town inspectors, so that when a threatened survey becomes imminent the killing plants can be closed down after a few days until all danger is passed. As four more diseased carcasses bearing the United States Bureau of Animal Industry "inspected and passed" stamp, were discovered in New York shops by the agents of Director Brown, thus proving that the federal government's inspection system also counts upon holes. I escorted the author of the confession recorded above to Commissioner of Accounts Wallstein, who learned that on the last twelve killing days of January, 1916, 3,364 carcasses were heaped out in the establishments operating under the jurisdiction of the New York City Health Department.

During this time 1,847 udders, so badly diseased that they were too unsightly for sale, were condemned. These condemnations indicated the true character of the cows that finally turn their death in order to feed New York City with diseased meat after a long career in the production of diseased milk.

Their physical condition at the time of slaughter indexed the quality of milk which up to that hour they had been producing for the butter and cheese factories of the State. Commissioner Wallstein needed no further stimulation. He began at once the construction of a trap that would catch the offenders and establish the legal evidence of their guilt.

In the mean time the New York State senators and assemblymen constituting the agricultural committee of the Legislature at Albany saw to it that all laws aimed at the eradication of the evils which these disclosures revealed were smothered.

One of the members of the committee that buried the bovine tuberculosis bill, formulated by Dr. Theobald Smith of the Rockefeller Institute, Dr. Veranus A. Moore of Cornell University, and Seth Low, was Senator Charles W. Wicks. Wicks was appointed by the Legislature to act as chairman of an investigating commission endowed by the representatives of the people with an appropriation of $25,000 for its expenses.

What the devilment which we are about to describe was being enacted the Wicks committee entered into a series of extraordinary adventures which culminated, in the latter part of 1916, in Governor Whitman's appointment of Senator Wicks to mem-
