BRANCH OF RED CROSS FORMED

Prominent Mechanicsburg Women Complete Organization For Active Work

Mechanicsburg, Pa., Feb. 15.—Activities in Red Cross work in the past few days that resulted in a permanent organization yesterday in this place, brings to light the fact that the work has been progressing here for two years. When the Home and War Relief Society of Harrisburg was organized in connection with the Red Cross work, Mrs. R. H. Thomas, Jr., represented Mechanicsburg and Miss Katharine Wheelock, Irving College. Through these representatives work was taken by the different aid societies of churches, The Woman's Relief Corps, and Irving College pupils accomplished a large amount of work. A number of persons also went to the sewing rooms in the organization at Harrisburg and worked there.

So much sympathy and enthusiasm have been exhibited by the Mechanicsburg people that Mrs. Alice Starr Hauck, who has been member of the National Red Cross Society ever since the days of Clara Barton, and assisted in state work during the Johnstown flood, concluded that it was the time to organize a permanent branch in Mechanicsburg. Accordingly, yesterday afternoon a large number of representative women of this place gathered at her home. With Mrs. J. Irvin Steel as temporary chairman and Mrs. William C. Lerch as temporary secretary, to effect an organization, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Alice S. Hauck; vice presidents, Mrs. George S. Constock, Mrs. Robert H. Thomas, Jr., Mrs. Norman L. Euwer, Mrs. A. E. Scher, Mrs. I. A. Pfeiffer, Mrs. George Fulton, Mrs. M. K. Sultzberger and Miss Margaret Blackburn; secretary, Mrs. John W. Happer, and treasurer, Mrs. William C. Lerch. Meetings will be held regularly and sewing commenced at once.

EFFORT TO SAVE JAMES ANTHONY

Defense in Newville Murder Case Trying to Establish Alibi For Accused Negro

Carlisle, Pa., Feb. 15.—Efforts to establish an alibi for James Anthony, a negro charged with killing Michael Ury, a construction foreman, at Newville on December 19, constituted the defense in the trial of the men. The Commonwealth is pressing for a first degree verdict.

After 65 additional jurors had been summoned, twelve were finally secured. The presentation of the main part of the prosecution's testimony closed late yesterday afternoon. Walter Bigler, engineer at the pumping station, and Charles Hamlet and Thomas Walton, two negroes who were in an altercation with Walton when the blow is alleged to have been struck, all declared positively that Anthony was the man who killed Ury. Several other witnesses also testified that they saw one of the three negroes had a year's schooling altogether, it was brought out.

Anthony alleged in his own defense that he was not near the pumping house on the day that he was in a nearby house, too drunk to walk and that witnesses will show this. It was intimated in his examination that another man was arrested previously charged with the crime, but got away. The jury will probably take the case on Friday.

THIRTEEN, BUT HAS DECIDED VIEWS ON IMPORTANT TOPICS

Robert W. Stuckenrath, 13 years old, of 1803 Market street, is a close follower of events in the newspapers that have vital bearing on the welfare of Harrisburg. In the course of his studies in the class taught by Professor Ferguson, Master Stuckenrath gave the following opinions on important subjects in an address before his class:

"As Mr. Ferguson has asked me to give but a short talk, it would be rather presumptuous of me to impose upon your time and patience, to the degree of entering into unnecessary and superfluous details.

"To speak of the much needed high school, the irregular ash collections, or better bathhouse facilities, would be but to add to the voiced sentiment of others, which are already sufficient. Therefore, I will dwell upon one of the lesser talked of, though nearly as important, topics of the day.

"The topic heretofore referred to is that of bogus advertising. Many justly indignant citizens of Harrisburg have been turned from centers of stores with the clerk's admonition, 'Come earlier next time, we are sold out of the thing you mentioned, call again.' To say the least, this is discouraging, if not aggravating. Some merchants actually have the audacity to make this declaration soon after opening time. Hundreds of dollars are spent in Harrisburg every year for advertising, fully five per cent of which is overdrawn, if not grossly exaggerated. This must be brought to a speedy termination. An advertisement censorship board is a needful accessory to our progressive municipality. In Boston, New York and Philadelphia this evil is not so eminent, and there is no reason why it should be here.

"Another unprepossessing factor in Harrisburg's detriment is the Market street subway. A tall man or woman, passing through, might harbor the fear that they would, perhaps, meet the same fate as Charles VIII, of France, who passing through a doorway, upon failure to stoop low enough, caused his head to collide so violently with the unyielding stone, that he died of the injuries received. After a rain of any consequence, this subway is rendered unfit for use, as the water oft-times reaches the three foot mark. This can be remedied only by installing adequate aqueducts for the outlet of the water, or by replacing the subway with a viaduct.

"The proposed Walnut street bridge which has been voted on and favored by the people, would offer a needful relief of traffic over the Mulberry street viaduct, and through the subway, which at times becomes so congested as to render traveling perilous. The city council is at present trying to evade the issue, but sooner or later it must be met and remedied."

NOBODY'S SUCCESS WILL HURT YOU

There's Room For All at the Top of World Big Ladder

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Jealousy and generosity are not even speaking acquaintances. Yet sometimes the same nature manages to harbor them both.

The woman who gladly gives of her best to her friends and who actually sacrifices herself for those she loves is likely bitterly to resent success which comes to them without help from her, and almost to begrudge them the freedom to express themselves. The man who will give a struggling young chap a hand up in the world is positively annoyed when that pretence climbs beyond the need of help.

What is the matter with us? Are we jealous and selfish and afraid to see others succeed? I think not. It is that most of us have an exaggerated idea of our own importance. We like the feeling of being benefactors; we rather enjoy being thanked; and we fairly bask in an atmosphere that permits us to feel like fairy godmothers and kindly genii.

Nobody's success hurts any other person's success. Each of us makes our own place; and none of us is called on to cling desperately to a narrow ledge in a cliff that gives only precarious footing above grim depths below. We can afford to see the other chap climb; he fact that he climbs above us in no way affects our own personal triumph if that is the best of which we are capable.

Not everyone can win in any competition. If you have it in you to be, you will be. If you have no better ability than will win you tenth place, begrudging someone else second place will not advance you one step. Most of us know this. Most of us forget it in the excitement of striving. We ought to be grateful for the competition which urges us out of lethargy and on to do our best. We ought to enjoy seeing the people we have helped win success. If for no better reason, that the selfish enjoyment of seeing our own judgment verified.

It's a great big world in which each of us plays our own part, and in which each of us chooses whether we will play that part well or ill. We cannot determine who shall be in the cast with us; nor can we keep a chorus girl from rising to be a star by merely envying her the ability we long to possess.

The point in playing your part is to put your very best into it and get the utmost out of it. As for everyone else, a good turn may help them and cannot possibly injure you materially and most help you spiritually.

So why not be generous in the true sense of the word—generous without any mental reservation that one will be generous only when looking down and helping others rise and jealous when looking up to see them succeed? There's room for us all in the world. Let us each play our own part without trying to spoil other people's exits and entrances or to steal any of their curtain calls.

There is success enough to go round. Taking what belongs to you leaves enough for everybody else. Trying to take what belongs to anyone else gives you nothing.
