There is certain to be an early test case of the law, carried to the Su-preme Court, if the President gives his expected approval to the law.

Before the end of the present session of Congress a joint resolution sion of Congress a joint resolution probably will be offered making the rider go into effect at the end of a year after its approval, instead of immediately after the President signs it. "Dry" members of Congress have laid themselves open to severe criticism from their constituents by failing to have the amendment expressly state that it applies to the District of Columbia. The amendment specifies only the laws of States and Territories of the United States. In almost every law relating to interstate commerce the District of Columbia is mentioned specifically.

Many members believe that the Reed amendment will restrict personal use to such an extent that a man cannot carry a bottle in a suitcase or a hip pocket.

use to such an extent that a man cannot carry a bottle in a suitcase or a hip pocket.

The House Rules Committee took up a resolution to discharge the District of Columbia Committee from consideration of the Sheppard-Barkley "dry" bill, and the "drys" were in control to such an extent that it virtually is assured that the bill will be thrown into the House in a day or two. The prohibitionists are confident of their ability to pass the Senate measure through the House without change. They are content to leave an incorrect date in one part of the bill so that it will not have to return to the Senate, in the belief that the courts would construct the intent of Congress.

The House Rules Committee to-day held an executive session to consider the question of reporting out a special rule to bring up in the House the bill for prohibition in the District of Columbia. The measure already has passed the Senate and now is pending in the House District Committee. Sentiment in the Rules Committee is said to favor the rule. The committee first gave a public hearing on the merits of the rule.

Conferees on the part of the House and Senate met to-day to thresh out differences over certain features of the Post Office Appropriation bill other than the "bone dry" prohibition amendment adopted by the House Wednesday. As soon as the bill is disposed of Chairman Moon, of the House Post Office Committee, is expected to try to get action on his resolution introduced yesterday which would postpone the effective date of the "bone dry" amendment until October 1 next. Many prohibition leaders who at first were opposed to a postponement are now said to favor it.
