CLOUDLESS SKY FOR CARLISLE

Former Indian School Superintendent Says General Pratt's Plans Will Prevail

Carlisle, Pa., Feb. 28.—The pending change in the superintendency of the Carlisle Indian school is causing much interest here. O. H. Lapps, who has been in charge of the institution for several years has been appointed to the national position of chief supervisor of Indian schools throughout the entire country, and John Francis, chief of Washington, will take his place after April 1.

Changes in the Indian service have been frequent and important during the past several years and the change here is in line with the policy of Cato Sells, since his appointment as Indian commissioner. Matters are now in such shape here that Mr. Lapps says: "No cloud is in the sky for Carlisle, everything is running smoothly, an increased appropriation has been secured this year and the enlargement of the plans of General Pratt, the founder of the school, is in operation."

In his new position Mr. Lapps will have charge of the general policy of the Indian schools and his duties will require his attention both at Washington and in the field. His family will, however, reside in Louistown, Idaho. John Francis, Jr., the newly appointed head, is 40 years old, and was born in Kansas. He attended the public schools in the State, Kansas University and graduated from Manlius Military Academy, N. Y., and the Columbian University at Washington, D. C. The experience of the new superintendent in the Indian service extends over a period of 12 years.

HARRISBURG MAN NOW PROSPEROUS FARMER

Huntsdale, Pa., Feb. 28.—From city to farm is the wide step that has been taken by S. A. Floyd, of Huntsdale, and for many years a prominent business man of Harrisburg. Mr. Floyd is now one of the wealthiest and most prosperous farmers of the Cumberland valley.

While in Harrisburg Mr. Floyd was engaged in the confectionery business and erected the Floyd Building on Market Square. Since his removal to the country, he inherited a large sum of money, and is adding large areas of land to his present large farm. One of the largest and best apple orchards in the State has been purchased by Mr. Floyd and he has refused to sell it at an advance of $2,500. A large saw mill near Moore's Mill also comes into the possession of the city-made farmer.

One of the latest plans of Mr. Floyd is to establish a large park on his mountain property at the base of the mountain. A stream of sparkling mountain water passed through this tract and already the owner had constructed small dams and lakes with fountains and splashes. Arrangements will probably be made to have a railroad siding run from the Reading tracks into the park, which will be made especially for the people of Harrisburg and the valley.

The seventh and eighth grades occupied their rooms to-day. The formal dedication of the building will be held Friday, May 18.

The new building is a two-story brick structure costing about $35,000, practically fireproof, containing eight school rooms, a large auditorium and several smaller rooms. The present building takes the place of the one destroyed by fire April 18, last year. The delay in the opening of the building is due to the shortage of labor and building materials. The building was designed by C. Howard Lloyd, architect, of Harrisburg, and built by Contractor A. Wildman. It is modeled after the school buildings of the larger cities. The two concrete and iron stairways make the building practically fireproof. The auditorium is situated at the front of the ground floor, and has a seating capacity of about 450. The engine room and toilets are in the rear on the ground floor. On the first floor are three schoolrooms and a large hall which can be made into a gallery of the auditorium.
