

PATRIOTIC DISPLAY MARKS INAUGURAL CEREMONIES IN NATIONAL CAPITAL

LITTLE GROUP OF WILFUL MEN RENDERS AMERICA HELPLESS

dent. The bill which would have permitted such combinations of capital and of organization in the export and import trade of the country as the circumstances of international competition have made imperative—a bill which the business judgment of the whole country approved and demanded—has failed.

"The opposition of one or two Senators has made it impossible to increase the membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission or to give it the altered organization necessary for its efficiency. The conservation bill, which would have had released for immediate use the mineral resources which still are locked up in the public lands, now that their release is more imperatively necessary than ever, and the bill which would have made the unused water power of the country immediately available for use, have both failed, though they have had better fortune, or more thorough consideration, than the sessions of two Congresses and have twice been passed by the House of Representatives.

Army Appropriations Fail "The appropriations for the army have failed, along with the appropriations for the civil establishment of the Government, the appropriations for the military academy at West Point, and the general education bill. It has been proved impossible to extend the powers of the Shipping Board to meet the special needs of the new situation into which our commerce has been forced, or to increase the gold reserve of our national banking system to meet the unusual circumstances of the existing financial situation.

"It would not cure the difficulty to call the Sixty-fifth Congress in extraordinary session. The paralysis of the Senate would remain. The purpose and the spirit of action are not lacking now. The Congress is more definitely united in thought and purpose at this moment, I venture to say, than it has been within the memory of any man now in its membership. There is not only the most united patriotic purpose but the objects members have in view are perfectly clear and definite. But the Senate cannot act unless its leaders can obtain unanimous consent. Its majority is powerless, helpless. In the midst of a crisis of extraordinary peril, when only definite and decided action can make the nation safe, or shield it from war itself by the aggression of others, action is impossible.

"Although, as a matter of fact, the nation and the representatives of the nation stand back of the legislative branch with unprecedented unanimity and spirit, the impression made abroad of course will be that it is not so, and that other Governments may act as they please without fear that this government can do anything at all. We cannot explain. The explanation is incredible.

"The Senate of the United States is the only legislative body in the world which cannot act when its majority is ready for action. A little group of wilful men representing no opinion but their own, have rendered the great government of the United States helpless and contemptible.

"The remedy? There is but one remedy. The only remedy is so altered that it can act. The country can be relied upon to draw the moral. I believe that the Senate can be called on to supply the means of action and save the country from disaster.

"At the same time the President authorized the further statement that what rendered the situation even more grave than it had been supposed that it was, was the discovery that the President, under his general constitutional powers, could do much of what he had asked the Congress to empower him to do, it had been found that there were certain old statutes as yet unrepealed which raised insuperable practical obstacles and virtually nullified his power.

"And yet we are not the less American in our argument. We should be the more American if we but remain true to the principles in which we have been bred. They are not the principles of a province or of a single continent, but they are the principles of a liberated mankind. These, therefore, are the things we shall stand for, whether in war or in peace.

HIGH LIGHTS OF PRESIDENT WILSON'S ADDRESS TO VAST THrong AT INAUGURATION

Says domestic problems, important though they be, must be set aside in order to give prompt attention to the international crisis the nation now faces.

Declares that though some of the injuries done us in connection with the war in Europe have become intolerable we still have been clear that we wished nothing for ourselves that we were not ready to demand for all mankind—fair dealing, justice and freedom to live and be at ease against organized wrong.

"We stand firm in armed neutrality since it seems that in no other way we can demonstrate what it is we insist upon and cannot forego."

Believes the nation may yet be drawn into war, but says: "Nothing will alter our thought or purpose."

"We are provincial no longer. The tragical events of the thirty months of vital turmoil * * * have made us citizens of the world."

"We shall be more American if we but remain true to the principles in which we have been bred."

Says the nation will stand for these things in war or peace: That all nations are equally interested in the peace of the world; the equality of nations in all matters of right; that peace cannot securely or justly rest upon an armed balance of power; the freedom of the seas; limitation of national armaments; discouragement by any state of revolution in any other state.

Asks the country to stand together, and "prays God to be given the wisdom and prudence to do my duty in the true spirit of this great people."

NATION CANNOT ABANDON RIGHTS

first inevitably set its mark from the first alike upon our minds, our industries, our commerce, our politics, our social action. To be indifferent to it or independent of it was out of the question.

"It is in this spirit and with this thought that we have grown more and more aware, more and more certain that the part we wished to play was the part of those who would vindicate and fortify peace. We have been obliged to arm ourselves to make good our claim to a certain minimum of rights; of freedom of action. We stand firm in armed neutrality since it seems that in no other way we can demonstrate what it is we insist upon and cannot forego."

MEN OPPOSED TO HOLDING UP AMERICAN RIGHTS

Twelve Senators, led by LaFollette, prevented the passage of the armed neutrality measure by filibustering until Congress adjourned at noon yesterday. When the measure was acted on in the House, thirteen Representatives voted against it. The names of the men who voted against the bill and who fought its passage follows:

- SENATE: Republicans—Clapp, Minn.; Cummins, Iowa; Gronna, N. Dak.; Kenyon, Iowa; La Follette, Wis.; Norris, Neb.; Works, Cal.—7. Democrats—Kirby, Ark.; Lane, Ore.; O'Gorman, N. Y.; Stone, Mo.; Vardaman, Miss.—5.
- HOUSE: Republicans—Benedict, Cal.; Cooper, Wis.; Davis, Minn.; Helgesen, N. Dak.; Lindbergh, Minn.; Nelson, Wis.; Stafford, Wis.; Wilson, Ill.—9. Democrats—Recker, Mo.; Sackelford, Mo.; Sherwood, Ohio—3. Socialist—London, N. Y.—1

dedicate ourselves to the great task to which we must now set our hand. For my part I beg your tolerance, your countenance and your united aid. The shadows that now lie dark upon our path will soon be dispelled and we shall walk with the sun of all about us if we be but true to ourselves and ourselves as we have wished to be known in the councils of the world and in the thought of all those who love liberty and justice and the right exalted."

COLD RAW WIND WHIPS GREAT CROWD

grand marshal of the inaugural procession, and his staff, began assembling in the court of the State, War and Navy building.

"An hour before the time for the President to pass from the White House to the capitol, New York troops were all in their positions, lined up with their backs to the crowds, standing ready with the butts of their rifles on the pavement. The men were spaced about eight or ten feet apart. It was the first time since the first inauguration of Lincoln that troops had been used to guard the line of march. Then, as now, the country was at a great crisis.

"While things were getting into motion about the capitol, the House, last minute preparations were rapidly taking form at the capitol. Senators were assembling for the special session and their part of the inaugural ceremonies and the great crowd on the plaza was gathering for the outdoor exercises.

"Just before 11 o'clock the President and party moved off for the capitol. The President, with bared head, smiled at the demonstration and cheerers swept over the crowd as he faced them. The President wore no overcoat and Chief Justice White asked him if he did not fear he might take cold. President Wilson smilingly responded he did not.

"Although the sun again came through the clouds, the whistling wind later caused the President to change his mind about the overcoat and he took one carried to the stand by his naval aide, Dr. Cary T. Grayson.

"The crowds cheered as the President came from the throng. "Hurrah for Woodrow Wilson," was repeated in chorus. The President and Mrs. Wilson smilingly acknowledged the plaudits of the multitude.

"In the White House party were Mrs. Sayre, Miss Margaret Wilson, Mrs. Bolling, Vance C. McCormick and Francis B. Sayre. The President took the oath standing before the Chief Justice and with the Vice-President. He lifted his hat to the crowd and began at once to deliver his address while the crowd leaned forward, but the high wind made it impossible for those more than a few feet away to hear the President's carriage. The sun broke out while the presidential party was on the way to the capitol. The troops along the line came to attention as the President passed. There were cheers from the crowds and some waving of hats and handkerchiefs.

Many People Gladly Tell About Benefits Derived From Cadomene Tablets Interesting, Sensational Facts

A Rheumatic Convalescent writes: Oct. 9, 1916. Gentlemen:—Last September I was taken with what the doctor called rheumatism. I tried to cure myself with all kinds of Rheumatic Medicines, but they did no good. I got a doctor and he came all last winter and by the first of June I was able to get about after a fashion. Father John's Medicine is an old-fashioned family remedy—not a patent medicine, but the prescription of a learned doctor. It is free from opium, morphine, chloroform or poisonous drugs which are found in many of the patent medicines; it contains no alcohol or other stimulants. It is a Food Medicine, pure and wholesome. Father John's Medicine has had more than 50 years' success for colds, grip and throat troubles. It is invaluable as a tonic and body builder and restores weak and run-down systems to health and strength. It nourishes the system and makes flesh.

MANIFESTO OF PATRIOTISM

MANIFESTO OF PATRIOTISM

"The majority of United States Senators favored the passage of the Senate bill authorizing the President of the United States to arm American merchant vessels, a similar bill having already passed the House by a vote of 403 to 13. Under the rules of the Senate allowing unlimited debate it appears impossible to obtain a vote previous to noon, March 4, 1917, when this session of congress expires. We desire the statement entered on the records to establish the fact that the Senate favored the legislation and would pass it if a vote could be obtained."

—Text of manifesto signed by seventy-six United States Senators.
