Conditioning the Subsoil For Aiding in Vigorous Growth

Little attention is given to the subject of the subsoil in both popular instruction and in bulletin literature for the farmer.

Alfalfa is known to thrive best with plentiful liming, and beside great productivity its other advantage is its ability to withstand drought.

It is the distinct function of lime that it mellow and crumbly earth, and it is characteristic of its action that it constantly works downward.

Our new spring showing of Tailored Suits outranks any presentation we have previously made in scope in brilliancy, in smartness.

They are the newest of the new creations—indeed, they have taken Fashion at its source so accurately that the garments here forecast to a remarkable degree what women will wear for the coming spring and summer.

The suits emphasize in line, in color and in texture the prevailing notes of style. Gold, chartreuse, green, rose, Copenhagen, sand, gray, navy blue, clay, black, etc., in

HAVE YOU EVER MET YOURSELF

Problem Is to Solve the Personal Equation by Inside Study

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How much do you know about the person with whom you will have to spend all the rest of your life—yourself? Do you understand your own ambitions, desires and tendencies? Do you know what you are likely to do under given circumstances—how you will react to sudden danger, what privation and struggle would do to you, or how you would conduct yourself if you achieve sudden and stupendous success?

You probably know nothing about any of these things, and yet they ought to be one of your most vital concerns.

I am not recommending that you become a self-centered individual, given to introspection and to constant brooding over your own nature. I am recommending just the opposite. Solve your "personal equation" and then use your knowledge quietly and unobtrusively.

Suppose a merchant were to try to run his store without discovering what his public demanded, which goods needed display to sell and which were staples to be asked for by the public; suppose he hired salespeople regardless of their fitness and trusted customers without any knowledge of their honesty or solvency.

Suppose, even, he rented a store without stopping to investigate the desirability of the location he had chosen—you wouldn't expect him to be a very successful merchant, would you?

Now, just why people expect to manage their own complex natures without any knowledge of their stock, minus information as to the effect they have on the world and the world has on them, is a real puzzle to any one who has common sense or efficiency.

When you have a problem in algebra to solve, you solve it and cease lying awake nights to worry about it. But the biggest problem you will ever have to solve—the problem of your own nature—is one you either neglect with utter indifference or go into quite casually.

It won't do! After all, in the words of the Belgian philosopher, Maeterlinck, "None but yourself shall you meet on the highway of fate." No one but you can pay for your blunders, no one but you can reap the benefit of your success. Those who love you may share—but what they are sharing is the worldly benefit—not the soul satisfaction or the keen disappointment and disillusionment.

You yourself lie at the root of every act you perform and every thought you think. Circumstances may warp and twist you; stern necessity may force you to an alien expression at times, but your reward or punishment is yours and is paid in person.

Blame whomsoever you like for your failures, thank whomsoever you choose for your successes—they still are yours.

Someone of prestige and importance may take an interest in you and give you a start in the world. He can wind you up and stand you on your feet like a mechanical doll—but he cannot keep you going! You have to be you when you meet your opportunity and you can use nothing that does not lie in your own nature.

You cannot stand before an audience in a great opera house and sing with somebody else's voice. The voice with which you sing is a God-given gift coming from a throat built a certain way, reinforced by a certain type of body and cultivated by a spirit that was willing to work and strive.

Chance does not make you. You make yourself. And if you want to get out of the $8 a week class into the $30 a week class you will have to do it with the qualities which lie in your own nature. Study your possibilities—in knowing them lies your one chance for real success.
