When Cheniworth began to miss the accustomed "shot" he begged for just a little to quiet his nerves. Police officials had never seen a victim use heroin and he was given a tiny pinch on paper. He bent over the "joy dust," took one long sniffle and immediately the effect could be noticed.

Both Penna and Cheniworth are prosperous looking and show no effects of the use of dope. Thorley is a physical wreck, almost the last stage. At though, only 22, his sallow features give him the appearance of a much older man. He is also tubercular. He pleads constantly for a cigaret, anything to allay the pain of the dying drugs.

Norfolk, Va., March 10. — When United States Marshal Saunders took possession of the liner Appam after the break with Germany, he found installed there a secret wireless apparatus by which all wireless messages sent in this section of the country were read.

A fine wire was found strung beneath the pipe leading to the whistle on the smoke stack of the Appam and extending above it as do the regular antennae of wireless. The wire led to the interior of the vessel where dynamos were kept running to make the current for lighting the ship.

Investigation, it is said, led to the discovery that the wire finally ran to the room ocupied by Lieutenant Hans Berg, where the messages, were recorded by flash from an electric bulb.
