P. G. Diener "He sells Diamonds"

Why do you carry a worn out Watch? IT disturbs your peace of mind. It makes you worry. It reflects on your business acumen and financial means. That's the rub, isn't it — the price of a new watch?

Do you know that a good, durable, dependable watch in a handsome gold-filled case can be bought for as little as $10 — that for $25 to $200 you can get a watch you'll be proud of in any company?

Come into Diener's and let us show you watches. You won't be asked to buy.

Your Answer to Our Call

To say pleased is putting it mildly. We're DELIGHTED! And the best part of it is, everybody was for 2,000 people. We don't expect to get them all in a day, or a week, or a month. But we were delighted with the ready response and no one went away without being satisfactorily fitted with glasses. Many answered our call and went away happy. They had nothing to lose—and everything to gain. Over and over again we heard expressions similar to, "Why, I didn't know Harrisburg boasted of an Optical establishment like this." That's why we are delighted.

Our records show 3,200 patrons up to March 5th. We called for 2,000 more for 1217 and judging from yesterday's response we'll over- reach that number. However, our offer still stands.

$2.00 Here's the Offer $2.00

Our expert eye examination (no drops), Sphere Lenses, slightly curved. Best made. We call for 2,000 people. We don't expect to get them all in a day, or a week, or a month. But we were delighted with the ready response and no one went away without being satisfactorily fitted with glasses. Many answered our call and went away happy. They had nothing to lose—and everything to gain. Over and over again we heard expressions similar to, "Why, I didn't know Harrisburg boasted of an Optical establishment like this." Springtime in the Shops

Just at this time well-dressed wo- men are brightening their winter frocks and suits with dainty new spring collars, to give the needed touch of smartness, and the charming models shown at the Woman's Ex- change, Third street at Herr, are as springlike as the flowers. There are lovely collars of fine white georgette inset with flit lace, and edged with fine cluny or net, or cordie col- lars with touches of embroidery, pretty sport collars of basket weave in both pink and white and blue and white stripes and some clever collars in the new mustard shade, with a design in contrasting colors. Prices range from 50c up.

Fascinating Millinery Millinery is always fascinating, but this season there is a charm, a very feminine daintiness in the new hats that makes them lovelier than ever, and the models shown in the French room at Astrich's, Fourth and Market streets, are "a joy to behold!" There is a pert sauciness in the smart little toques, and narrow-brimmed, high- crowned saliors, a coquetry in the droop of the big, graceful hair braid creations, and a witchery in the soft folds of black tulle that sometimes disguise even the most tailored hats.

The grace and beauty of the French heel will keep it in vogue for smart footweat for a long time to come, but many women prefer a heel of sterner appearance for their street shoes, and the Walk-Over Boot Shop, 226 Mar- ket street are offering a boot with a new military heel in triangular effect with its three corners rounded to avoid any angularity of line. This heel is shown on a good-looking new boot of black Cade, and is a buttoned model with a straight tip marked by perforations, and a conventional walk- ing sole. It sells for just $7.00.

Normal Living Good health in the spring is largely a matter of normal living, and health- ful diet and the Studebaker Grocery Store (Mr. George Barnes), Second street, at the crossing of State, offers many wholesome foods, equally recom- mended for children and "grown-ups!" They offer a new cereal to be used like oatmeal, but this is a cracked wheat, which has many advantages over oats as a healthful food in the spring. They also offer bran bread and bran cereals which are excellent for daily use—and there is a whole- some milkline in all the food pro- ducts which come from this store.
