AUDIENCE HEARS OF SCOTCH PROSE

Last of Dr. McGowan's Delightful Talks on Scotland and Her Great Authors

Last night closed the series of lectures on Scottish literature by the Rev. Dr. Robert McGowan, of Pittsburgh, at the Civic Club under the auspices of the College Club of Harrisburg. Great regret was expressed that these most delightful talks (Dr. McGowan was so completely one with his audience that the term "lectures" seems absurd) were not to continue during the remainder of the season.

The subject last evening was the "Kale-yard School," the cabbage-patch of the everyday folk, from which sprang all the best of Scottish writers, all the really big men who have ever achieved great things in her history. Dr. McGowan spoke of S. R. Crockett and quoted from the works of Ian MacLaren and J. M. Barrie, showing their wonderful power of drawing character studies and the keen, sparkling humor alternating with the pathos. In "Beside the Bonny Brier Bush" "Window in Thrums," "The Little Minister," "Sentimental Tommy," etc., this natural touch is very evident.

A man of humor is of the dry kind which sees the weakness of human nature, but loves men none the less for it, he explained, but while a Highlander can love deeply and devotedly no Scottish writer has ever been able to do justice to it. "They can't tell it. They feel it, but they can't tell it, for a Scotchman knows the big silence of the crags and cliffs, dry eye."

As a closing tribute the speaker eulogized all motherhood. "It is the Scottish mither who give their lads their fine ideas of woman and ye'll no find one of them that does na exalt all mitherhood with his pen. I know, I had a wifie who said, 'Thank God for Scotland's mithers,'" he exclaimed.

ment, including rifle, pistol, sabre and all other accoutrements.

It is also expected to make use of some of the other subjects now being pursued at the Walnut street school. Members of the institution who are now pursuing the subject of surveying would be sent out in squads at different times to make military maps of the country surrounding Harrisburg, and at the same time formulate plans for offense and defense in case of an attack by an enemy.

May Have Summer Camp
It is also hoped to place the troop in camp during the coming summer. A way to secure funds for this project will be discussed at a later date. At last night's meeting it was decided to have a signal squad, a hospital squad, and an engineering squad in addition to the regular cavalry drills. Work was begun last night on a portable wireless station to be used by the signal squad.

At the gathering last evening J. Grant Koons gave the candidates a black board talk on formations. Seventy-eight have already signed the pledge and obligations prepared by Mr. Koons. Other plans that will keep the troop active are on foot, and if the project can receive the proper backing, it is expected that the troop will be placed on first class footing ready to leave the city on twenty-four hours' notice.

Panels may be drawn for only two weeks, and men summoned are forbidden to inform any one but families of summons for jury duty, either. When a case is called the list shall be shown to counsel and not until then. When the jurors have been selected, which shall be in the present manner, the list is to be returned to maintain the whole plan is to be secret as much secrecy as possible.

Victims of the proposed act would be made punishable by a fine of one or one year in jail, or both.

Springtime in the Shops

The municipal opening planned for to-morrow is a splendid example of co-operative spirit and the progressive and up-to-date policy of the Studebaker Grocery Store (Mr. George Barnes), Second street at the crossing of State, is shown by the enthusiastic interest and interesting window displays they are offering. Though groceries might seem like prosaic merchandise for window displays, this store has always been known for the specialties and novelties which they carry and which are not found elsewhere, and their special window display is well-worth seeing.

Modern Furnishings
The new lacquered furniture is advocated by the modern decorator as a means of bringing the necessary touch of brilliant color in the home, though keeping it in perfect harmony and good taste, and the Goldsmith Store, North Market Square, is as usual foremost in their display of new designs. In their interesting assortment they offer a very wonderful chair of Queen Anne design lacquered in Chinese red, traced with black, which would give a warm touch of color to a deep-toned library or living room, and this is but one of many pieces of distinctive charm which they are showing.

Short Frocks and High Shoes
Though there have been rumors that Spring frocks are to be longer, as frock after frock appears on smartly dressed women they seem, if anything, shorter than ever, and it is now an assured fact, that American women will wear their street suits and frocks from six to nine inches from the ground. That probably accounts for the fact that one of the newest models shown by the Walk-Over Boot Shop, 226 Market street, is cut exceedingly high, and has proved to be one of the most popular shoes for spring. It is of black glazed kid with a smart Lou heel of leather, is laced, of course, and very trimly finished. It sells for just $8.00.

Of Interest to Men
Several times in the past few days I have noticed the number of men who congregate to look in the windows of the Douthich Store, 204 Market street, and it is interesting to note how many different classes of men find merchandise to interest them in this display. Up-to-date young men mingle with conservative businessmen, and dignified professional men, and a few days ago, a whole army of high school boys marched down in a body to inspect these windows, probably attracted by the smart gray suits shown there, and judging from this advanced interest, every one will have to come early who hopes to get a peep at the Douthich windows to-morrow night.

The Outside of the House
Does your home present the same tidy appearance outside that you insist upon on the inside? Window shades of uniform color are necessary to get this effect, and yet different tones are needed to blend with the decorations of the various rooms, and the A. B. Tack Wall Paper Shop, 1216 North Third street, offers the most approved shades on guaranteed Hartshorn rollers which can be made of uniform color on one side and different colors on the other. Expert service both in adjusting shades and in selecting correct colors is assured at this shop.
