WHOLE TIME CASE GETS A DECISION

Doctor's Wife Entitled to Compensation Declares the State Board Today

The State Compensation Board in an opinion by Chairman Mackey has refused to set aside the agreement for compensation in the claim of Van Wert vs. American High Explosives Company, Pittsburgh, in which the contention was raised that the husband of the claimant, a physician, engaged in general practice when not attending to professional work for the employees of the company.

The opinion says: "It must be borne in mind that the defendant could have engaged the deceased's entire time; that its own employees were treated by him at various places in that community and that had he declined to answer any call of the defendant at any time of day or night to treat one of its employees, no matter where he might have been, the defendant could have exercised its power of discharge. On the day of the fatal accident the doctor was answering a call when his automobile was struck at a grade crossing and he was killed. It does not seem to us to be reasonable to hold that the deceased under these circumstances could have been held not to be in the course of employment for the defendant until he actually was engaged in his examination or treatment of the employee of the defendant on the premises of the defendant."

The Board concludes that it would not have power to set aside the agreement of compensation. In another opinion the Board again refused compensation in the claim of Ida E. Smith vs. the City of Reading on the ground that nothing but hearsay evidence was produced at the second hearing. It has also set aside the decision of Referee Snyder in the claim of McClemens vs. Hamilton Company, on the ground that "The relationship of cause and effect must be established by evidence, not by inference."

"When do the Giants start their regular exhibition schedule?" asks Fanatic. We should say on the first day wherein the Zim is evicted from the entertainment. If this doesn't make it regular we don't know.

In Case of War Sir: Preparedness among the ball players might help out France in case America went to war against Germany, but imagine a baseball team marching side by side to the charge with an English regiment--the aforesaid baseball team embracing Schultz, Zimmerman, Grob, Peckinpaugh, Baumann, Schupp, Holke, Malsel, Wagner, Schaefer--names that sound like the official line-up of the Prussian Guard!

The Veteran Retires The announcement of the tournament retirement of Walter J. Travis recalls his last championship affair. This was in the Metropolitan hunt at Apawams in June, 1915.

The Old Man had four men between him and that Met. title jubilee--the four being Jerome D. Travers, Percy Platt, Oswald Kirkby and John D. Anderson. It would be hard to pick four better men at match play. Travers had beaten Travis something like four times in a row in amateur championships. Kirkby had beaten him in three successive tournaments.

Willard and War If any fighter has an alibi in time of war it will be Jess Willard. Standing in the average trench, his head would be three or four inches above the top, and those three or four inches might easily embrace at least one vulnerable spot. In a charge across the open Willard would be a target that even a blind sniper couldn't miss. All that would be necessary would be for aforesaid sniper to blaze away in the Kansan's general direction. If Willard could be engaged in armor he would make a wonderful rampart for a company or a regiment to use on defense. But to ask him to offer that immense bulk known as his anatomy as a target would be asking more than any other citizen would have to give.

Besides, if it came to a showdown, Willard could prove officially that he was a circus man, and not a fighter.

The Vet If Hans Wagner drops out this season, baseball's major league veteran will be Wahoo Sam Crawford. The Tiger slugger started his big league career with Cincinnati in 1899, a matter of eighteen seasons ago. Last season he dropped below .300, but a mark of .286 is far beyond the average range.

Twin Possibilities Wagner will quit--he's through with play-- He will not start again this year; And John D. may be broke by May-- If you believe all things you hear.

AMUSEMENTS

ORPHEUM--To-night -- The San Carlo Opera Co. Wednesday, night only, March 28 -- Robert B. Mantell in "Hamlet." Coming Friday evening, March 30-- David Belasco presents "Seven Chances." MAJESTIC--Vaudeville. COLONIAL--"The Last of the Ingrahams." REGENT--"The Last Sentence."

The story of "Ir Trovatore," the opera announced by the San Carlo Opera Co. as the attraction at the Orpheum to-night. Count di Luna had two sons. The younger is supposed to have been bewitched by a gypsy woman, who was therefor burned alive.

"Ir Trovatore" will be followed by "The Last Sentence," featuring Miriam Nesbitt and Marc MacDermott. Briefly, the story tells how Judge Crosby, presiding at a murder trial, is called upon to sentence the defendant, a handsome young woman, to death in the electric chair. Just before he rises to pass sentence he discovers that the prisoner is his own daughter, who had been kidnapped by a murderer Stricken to the heart, he speaks the sentence and falls forward, completely paralyzed. Then follows a remarkable series of tenses dramatic scenes, showing how Crosby, despite his helpless condition, directs the humane search for evidence which will persuade the Governor to grant a pardon. At last--but you must see the picture. Wallace Reid and Anita King, in their first starring vehicle, "The Golden Fetter," will be the attraction Monday and Tuesday.

"The Last of the Ingrahams," a gripping story of New England life, starring William Desmond and Margery Wilson, will be the attraction at the Colonial Theater to-day. The leading characters of this human interest story are a wealthy young man of Cape Cod, who has fallen so low as to become a habitual drunkard, and a girl who is a social outcast, who, together with her mother, work out their salvation, a story that will hold the most hardened picture patron's interest. "One in Oil," a funny Triangle comedy, will be the added attraction of the program. Monday, one day only, William Desmond will again top the program in "Blood Will Tell," a Triangle feature that is said to be the best picture in which this popular star has ever appeared. The story deals with a young man who makes good. Coming, Wednesday and Thursday, Earle Williams in "Arsene Lupin."

He learns that Duchess Leonora, believing him dead, is about to enter a convent. He sets out and overtakes her just in time, conducting her to Casellor, which place is at once besieged by Di Luna. The troubadour is preparing for his marriage when he suddenly learns that his wife has been seized and taken prisoner. On the eve of the day set before the execution of his wife, Leonora suddenly appears before Di Luna, offering her hand in marriage in exchange for the life of Manrico. The count agrees.

Leonora is permitted to enter the prison to release Manrico. On her way, however, she takes poison. Manrico, who doubts Leonora, now sees her faithful. Di Luna enters, takes in the situation at a glance, and orders that Manrico be killed. During the confusion Manrico escapes through the window that she may behold the fate of her son. She then exposes her secret and at last Manrico and his brother, mother, thou art revenged.

Following its half-year run in New York, David Belasco will present his new comedy, "Seven Chances," at the Orpheum Theater on Friday, with the original Belasco Theater production and cast intact. "Seven Chances" is a thoroughly human comedy that appeals to all classes of theatergoers. The comedy is bright, clean and wholesome and laughter pervades the entire action from beginning to end.

Seven eligible girls are invited to a party especially arranged for the occasion. Each of the girls has a different proposal to them all. He is refused by each for a different reason and is almost on the verge of losing the money when he and a girl, with whom he has fallen in love and who refused his previous offer of marriage because it was a business proposition, find happiness together.

The Messrs. Shubert's production of "The Blue Paradise" will be the stellar attraction at the Orpheum on Saturday, March 24. This beautiful Viennese operetta has just finished a remarkable engagement of one complete calendar year at the Casino Theater in New York, which is a record for musical comedies in Broadway. The popularity it enjoyed in Broadway has resulted in glowing reports of the delights it affords to playgoers to spread to all parts of the country and its local visit is regarded as one of the foremost treats of the year.

Billie Burke's "Tango Shoes" that heads the new bill of vaudeville at the Majestic the last half of the week, is another of those Majestic novelty offerings in which the elements of curiosity and mystery play such an important part.

RUSSIA HOLDS TO FOREIGN TREATIES

New Government Will Be Big Factor in War's Prosecution

By Associated Press London, March 24.--Foreign Minister Miliukoff has outlined the attitude of the new Russian government in foreign affairs to a number of Petrograd and Moscow journalists.

A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd quotes the foreign minister as saying: "We shall remain faithful to all past alliances similar to that with our allies, which will be still further strengthened and become still more cordial and sincere. The change in regime will dispense the distrust our allies had a right to feel toward the late government. It is Russia's duty to continue the struggle brilliantly both for her own liberty and that of all Europe."

"By the change in regime we definitely won the sympathy of neutrals, especially Sweden, while Finland, thanks to the restoration of her constitution, has become our sincere friend. Our allies came into touch with the new regime without an instant's delay, understanding that the old regime was a serious hindrance to that organization of the Russian people which is necessary for a final triumph. "To-day Russia is no longer a dead weight in the coalition of allies. She is a productive force. Henceforth all rumors of a separate peace must vanish once for all. It would be anti-national for freed Russia to come to an understanding with reactionary Germany."

"HAMLET" ROBERT MANTELL Monday morning the sale for the Robert B. Mantell engagement in "Hamlet," opens at the box office of the Orpheum Theater. This is the only engagement of a Shakespeare play this season, and judging from the large number of mail orders, the house will be filled to its capacity. The play itself, was chosen for presentation from Mr. Mantell's huge repertoire of twelve classic dramas by the local authorities of the city and critical theatergoers here in general. This repertoire is the most difficult and extensive that has been presented by any American actor since the day of Edwin Booth, and Mr. Mantell's success in the interpretation of these great roles has led to his recognition by veteran critics all over the country as the foremost actor now on the new world stage.
