WHY BATTERIES WILL WEAR OUT

Chemical Process That Governs Life of Battery

"The storage battery," says D. J. wear out as tires and like the tire, it of all changes to March 15, 1917.
must be given careful attention by the The department is conducting owner if the longest possible life is to be obtained from it.

"A storage battery is a chemical apparatus consisting of positive and negative lead plates immersed in electrolyte, a solution of sulphuric acid. When the starting motor is used or the lights or ignition system put on the circuit, a certain electro-chemical action takes place between the positive and negative plates in the presence of the elec-trolyte and electricity flows through the wires.

"As this chemical action continue the character of the plates change and

"As this chemical action continues the character of the plates change and the current will, ultimately, cease to flow and the batery will be dead. This condition, however, is forestalled by the generator, causing the current to flow in the opposite direction, or to 'charge' the battery.

"Charging the battery does not mean that electricity is being stored up by the battery, but that by mean of electricity the plates are being restored to the condition in which they were before the discharge began.

"Because it is a chemical apparatus, then, and not mechanical like a machine of iron and steel, the storage battery cannot be subjected to wear and tear of service without gradually deteriorating. Even when the battery is at rest, some action is going on, and discharge is slowly taking place. "In time the plates lose their capacity for reacting to the electrical charging. The insulation is all the time gradually wearing out and finally that gives way. Even with the best of care and with the best possible material, this is going to happen with any storage battery.

"But the battery does not always receive the best attention. It is the one accessory on the car which the average car owner seems to neglect. The car owner, however, should get his full money's worth from a good battery if he gives it care, although, as we have pointed out, he should expect to buy a new battery some day. This is just as reasonable an expense as buying a new tire.

"From the foregoing it is perfectly obvious that batteries must be made new tire.

"From the foregoing it is perfectly obvious that batteries must be made of the best quality possible to begin with and then, if they are to be kept in efficient-condition they must have good treatment at the hands of the owners. It is impossible to prescribe any definite term of life for a storage battery for its period of efficiency may vary greatly, according to the two factors just mentioned, as well as in accordance with the quality and condition of the starting motor and generator.

Does the Housewife care whether it costs 2½ cents or 48 cents?

HE does! Investigation of a thousand stores show that package delivery costs range from 2½ cents to 48 cents a package.

With leagues and clubs and investigating committees probing the cost of living—the housewife is at last getting at these long-hidden facts.

Her trade is going to the alert merchant with the modern methods.

The day of horse delivery is past. It limits a merchant's volume. A horse can't cover enough territory to keep down the cost per package.

Then along comes the storekeeper who uses a converted pleasure car, which burns up gasoline and tires and eats its head off with repair bills. He says motor delivery doesn't pay-when his only trouble is that he has picked the wrong
