Schwab Making 150 Big Guns For England

Bethlehem, Pa., April 17.—The British War Office has placed an order with the Bethlehem Steel Company for 150 of the nine-point twos, which are being manufactured as rapidly as the facilities of the plant permit.

The English nine-point two is made in the shape of a howitzer, and is so much liked by the British army artillerists that they call it "a darling weapon." A number of the expert machinists that are making them are Englishmen, some of them being mechanical engineers of high ability.

Although only about fourteen feet long, these guns are exceptionally well built, as they are fired with an exceptionally high explosive. They are extraordinarily powerful, and in proportion to destructiveness are said to be the easiest handled of any gun that is used along the front. In the present drive of General Haig's army these guns are hauled forward by four horses. One of the British gunmakers who is working on them says they have a range of ten miles, and that neither man nor beast will remain alive within a radius of 100 yards of the spot where man nor beast will remain alive within a radius of 100 yards of the spot where the shell strikes the ground.

MUSTEROLE FEELS:

It Gets to That Sore Spot
Like Magic

A-a-h! That's delicious relief for those sore muscles, those stiff joints that lame back.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made with the oil of mustard and other home simples.

It does the work of the oldfashioned mustard plaster, minus the plaster and minus the blister!

You simply rub Musterole on the spot where the pain is—rub it on briskly—and usually the pain is gone.

No muss, no bother. Just comforting, soothing relief—first a gentle glow, then a delightful sense of coolness. And best of all, no blisters like the old-fashioned mustard plaster used.

Scott Stilwell says:

"In a little city in the Middle West Miss Anne Prentiss, a retired school teacher, lived in a cozy little apartmeint. By hard work, through many years, she had saved $20,000, which, carefully invested, yielded her $1,000 a year. Her pleasures were few and inexpensive. With the friend who lived with her, and the two old ladies in the apartment up-stairs she would play cribbage on Saturday nights. The four old ladies were very good friends. To her friend, and housemate, Miss Prentiss had bequeathed $5,000 in her will; the balance of the $20,000 she haddivided among her favorite nephews and nieces, taking special care that none of the results of her life work should go to her worthless and dissolute brother. "One night, over an especially ex-citing game of cribbage, the four old ladies quarreled, and the following Saturday when Miss Prentiss called up the dumb waiter to invite the two friends down they replied that they would never play with her again.
