Supplies now are being forwarded to the destitute Armenians and Sy-rian refugees in the trans-Caucasus region by a new route from Moscow to Alexandranopol and Ervan. Future deliveries by this new route, will be comparatively easy, the committee an-nounces.

Notwithstanding the relief already afforded, the agents of the committee in Armenia and Syria, in messages just received here, state that "condi-tions are worse than last year" because the stores of supplies have been ex-housted hausted. "The condition of refugees has reached a critical stage," wires the agent at Erivan. Nearly two years exiled from their homes. What little money or possessions they were able to bring with them now exhausted. Great distress from hunger. Bedding entirely lacking. Appalling numbers of widows with dependent children."
