The N. L. and Preparedness

Dear Sir. The American League has gone in for preparedness in the right way. At first I had an idea that it was only for advertising purposes and would soon fade out. Now I see my mistake. But what I would like to know is this. How can the older leagu

Waking up the National League sounds much softer than it actually is. Just why a league with a sporting history that dates back over forty years should be so absolutely out of focus with the times—should be so utterly insensible to the new spirit through the land—is beyond all understanding. There is no diagnosing such a situation.

"Is it true," queries a reader, "that Great Britain's amateur golf champion has been killed? No. Larry Jenkins, of Troon, Scotland, who won the last British championship, played in 1914, left with the first division of volunteers for France. Since that time reports have come that he has been wounded, but he is still alive. As Jenkins has been serving nearly three years at the front, only a few of those who left with him are still in-tact. Any number of England's best golfers have been, killed. The list includes Jack Graham, Norman Hunter and scores of others who were among the first to go. But so far the Amateur Champion has escaped.

On Being Ready

It has been argued that this nation, trained and ready, would be far more eager to jump into war when the present conflict has been concluded. The best answer we have seen to this was written some years ago by the late Hugh Keough:

icough:
"The most peaceable person we ever have met
Was the man who talked softly but ever was set
And figured on giving more than he would get,
And could swing with the cross and the upper;
This man never fought and he was was whipped,
They took him on faith how he looked when, he stripped—
Your bones he would crush when your flipper he gripped
And smilingly asked you to supper."

There is more than a minute bit of philosophy in that one line—"They took him on faith how he looked when he stripped"—this comes as close to telling the complete story as words could arrange it.

In arranging your baseball dope for the year kindly recall these details—last season the Giants won two of their first fifteen games and then immediately thereafter won nineteen of their next twenty-one. When you have fully digested this you can then proceed to the next lesson.

One of the main wonders of this nation is that it has never been forced adopt conscription for its umpires. It is easy to see how a man might unteer for war—but volunteering to umpire is another affair.

"So far Les Darcy has traveled 5,000 miles looking for a chance and a place to fight," notes an exchange. Before Les finally gets discouraged there is a chance that he can be accommodated at the first recruiting station beyond the Canadian border. It may be worth looking into, anyway.

Fred Markle who is on record as pulling the biggest "bone" and losing the championship for the Giants has been purchased by Chicago and will play first base. Vic Saier is out with a broken leg. It was Merkle's failure to touch second base that lost the game and title. It is said the Cubs paid $13,000 in cash for Merkle's release. Philadelphia, April 23.—Both Harvard and Brown Universities will be reported at the Pennsylvania Relay races to be held on Franklin Field April 27 and 28, it was announced today. Because of the discontinuance of athletic activities at Harvard doubt was expressed as to whether the crimson colors would be seen at the relays while Brown had a previous engagement with Amherst for a dual meet and was not expected here. Amherst, however, has canceled the meet. Harvard's entries include Meanix in the 100 yards dash. Brown will send a relay team and in addition will be represented in the 100 yards dash by White and Mulanne.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 23.—Marriage goes merrily on in Milwaukee, regardless of the Eugenics law.

Figures in the county clerk's office show an increase both in 1915 and 1916 over 1914 in the number of licenses issued. The Eugenics law, in operation for three years has had no effect upon the celebration of the time-honored nuptials.

"I still maintain that the Eugenics law has been of tremendous benefit to the people of the State," declared Mrs. G. A. Tipke, sponsor of the law. "It is asserted that doctors make only superficial tests of men who come to them for examination before marriage, but I contend that no
