Feeding Family at a Lower Cost

If our incomes just naturally increased as the cost of living went up, we wouldn't have to bother our heads much about economy. But, unfortunately, the opposite seems to be the case though, of course, it isn't.

So nowadays the thrifty-minded housekeeper lays her plans to utilize the lower-priced food stuffs and to spend both sides of every dollar.

This sounds simple enough in theory, but when it comes to a practical test the task from

But many housekeepers have discovered that there is a way to feed their families at allower cost-by studying the

Domestic Science Pages THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD

These pages, now quite famous in Philadelphia, are helpful, thoroughly practicable and, above all, effective of many considerable economies.

This department, known as Household Economics, is under the personal direction and active supervision of Mrs. Nevada Davis Hitchcock, a practical housekeeper of exceptional ability, and Instructor of Economics, and her pages, which appear every Tuesday and Thursday, with special articles on Sunday, will actually teach you how to feed your family better at a lower cost. They give you tried and successful recipes, appetizing and wholesome menus and they tell you of the food values of various foods, together with frequent tabulated lists of the prices current for meats, vegetables, fruit and so on.

Altogether quite an interesting feature and, like all other features of The Record-Always
