ENTENTE NOT TO ASK FOR ALLIANCE

Coming into the war will see it through to the great end we all hope for. Mr. Balfour after his first two days in the American capital consented to an interview to express his deep gratitude for the warmth of his reception and his conviction that America's services in the war could not be exaggerated. Standing in the midst of a semicircle of correspondents, Mr. Balfour spoke with the deepest feeling of the losses already experienced in France and England and of the gratitude felt in both countries at the decision of the United States to enter the war. "I am told," said Mr. Balfour, "that in his recent address critics who say the object of the commissions in coming to this country is to inveigle the United States out of its traditional policy and enter it in a career opposed to all its teachings. Such an attempt would be utterly unnecessary and futile. If there is any certainty in human affairs it is that the United States, having come into the war, will see it through. "For two and a half years," Mr. Balfour continued, "people here in this country have watched the great and bloodstained drama abroad and with each passing month the conviction has grown that this was no ordinary struggle involving a few miles of territory, or some small national ambitions, but nothing short of the whole welfare of mankind. Such a cause, Mr. Balfour said, could not fail to affect the United States. "Nothing to Turn U. S. "And now, when after all these months you feel impelled to enter the struggle I am certain you will throw into it all your resources in a comparably the richest in the world, all your man-power and your will and effort; I am sure nothing will turn you from your consecrated task until success crowns our joint efforts. Mr. Balfour speaking of the arrival of the French commission here to-day, said the commission was memorable, especially as one of its members was General Joffre. "The success of the general commanding the allied forces at one of the most critical moments in history. There is no question but that the fate of the Marne was the most decisive in the history of mankind. "We rejoice to think," Mr. Balfour said, "that the hero of that battle has come to join us in laying before the people of the United States our gratitude for the infinite aid and moral encouragement given to the allied cause. I am certain that the reception accorded to them will be not less warm or heartfelt than that so ungrudgingly given us."

RAILWAYS TOLD TO FILE HIGHER RATE SCHEDULE

Fifteen Per Cent. Increase to Hinge on Later Investigation

Washington, April 25.—The Interstate Commerce Commission to-day prescribed the method of procedure in the fifteen per cent. rate advance cases by permitting the railroads to file supplemental tariffs covering the increase. This is in line with the commission's tentative order entered a few days ago. The new tariffs will be subject to protest, suspension, complaint, investigation and correction, the commission announced and their filing is only preliminary to detailed consideration of the application and does not dispose of the cases. The order issued, in making public its order issued, the following statement: Following requests by the carriers throughout the country to be permitted to file supplemental tariffs covering the increase, the commission has recently heard in conference a large number of representatives of the carriers and shippers respecting the matter. The purpose of these requests is to avoid the expense and delay incident to the full and detailed preparation and re-publication of all of the existing rate schedules, substituting in detail the proposed increased rates for those now in effect. To Act Quickly. The commission deems it to be in the public interest that the question of the propriety and reasonableness of these proposed increases should be reached as promptly as possible and disposed of as promptly as may be feasible and practicable, consistent with the ends of justice. Therefore, acting under the discretion with which it is vested by section six of the act to regulate commerce the commission has issued the foregoing orders announced to-day authorizing the filing of rate supplements as therein stated. In view of erroneous reports that have been published it seems proper to state that the commission has reached no determination and therefore expresses no opinion on the question of the reasonableness of propriety of such proposed increases, which as indicated in the orders referred to will be subjected to protest, suspension, complaint, investigation and correction if in conflict with any provision of the act. To Hear Protest. "Reasonable opportunity will be afforded for the presentation and consideration of protests." Indications are that the commission will soon date its hearings at which the merits of the increases will be considered and shippers and other interested parties will be given an opportunity to state their views fully. The effective date of the order, should it be finally approved, is changed from June 1 to July 1.
