THREE SYSTEMS FOR BROODING CHICKS ARTIFICIALLY

Merits of the Colony Brooder, Long Brooder House and the Brooder Stove Study the Tone of the Chick's Voice For a Guide to Its Comfort and Well Being

By G. K. Smith Author and Practical Poultryman It is not enough to buy the chicks. The biggest business after all is to raise them. That means feeding, brooding, and caring for them. Most poultrymen succeed or fail here. My friend bought twenty-five day-old chicks. They were "as fine as silk." But he had no brooding facilities, therefore one after another died until he had only two left. He raised three to maturity. If it had been twenty-five hundred instead of twenty-five, another poultryman would have "failed." When a baby comes everything should be in order to raise it right. A chick is not a thing in the world. It is a walking egg. Tenfold more care must be given it than is given the newly-laid egg. The small colony brooder is mostly used by the amateur and by those who keep small flocks. It is a complete brooding plant on a small scale. Six feet by three is the usual size. It is therefore easily portable and can be used out of doors in cold weather, or indoors, to suit convenience. It is divided into two equal compartments, the central partition being removable to double the space run of the chicks as they develop. The heat is furnished by the kerosene lamp at one end outside the brooder. It communicates with a circular hover within. The small colony brooders now on the market have been improved until they are practically perfect. But, like any other mechanism, they must be handled with knowledge and skill or they can do great damage. Absolutely cleanliness throughout must be insisted upon always. The floor of both apartments should be kept an inch thick with clean sand, and this should be scattered an inch of fine litter, preferably alfalfa or clover. In this should

Roberstovon, to Mary Kreider, of Roberstovon. He has two sons, one daughter, thirty-one grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. Let them out on the ground as soon as it can be done with perfect safety

Not more than 75 chicks should be brooded under one hover with the small colony brooder. More will mean crowding, and a consequent danger for the whole flock. Avoid extremes of temperature. Keep the birds comfortable. The tone of the chick's voice will proclaim its general condition. Study this. When five or six weeks old the toughening process should be advanced as to dispense with artificial heat, except in very cold weather. When two months old the youngsters should be taken out on range and fight their battles with success. Let the hardening be gradual and well timed from the beginning. For centuries industrious housewives have preserved small fruits and vegetables for winter use

Why not eggs? They may be similarly preserved, and it is simpler and less expensive than preserving fruit. In next week's article this method of reducing the H. C. of L. will be carefully discussed by a government specialist.

Exact formula on every can

Even an expert cannot tell by looking at varnish whether it is adulterated. That is why it is so important that you should always buy varnish with a guarantee formula.

DEVOO THE GUARANTEED VERNOSITE THE LONG LIFE SPAR VARNISH PALE INTERIOR VARNISH MARBLE FLOOR FINISH

For outside work and all surfaces exposed to water, use Vernosite. It will not turn white from rain or sleet and the sun will not blister it. For inside woodwork where extremely transparent varnish is required, use Pale Interior. It preserves the natural beauty of the wood, is hard to mar and won't scratch white.

For all floors use Marble Floor Finish. It is made of wood, and enables it to withstand the severest wear and tear without marring.

We strongly recommend these three varnishes, because the guarantee formulas on the cans prove that they have been properly aged and that they are absolutely free from rosin and other adulterants.

Never take chances with varnish. Get Devoo and be sure.
