

BOY SCOUTS PLAN TO HELP GUARD NATION'S COASTS

Movement Working With Government For a Work Boys Can Do

The Boy Scouts of America have found another way to fulfill their obligation of "duty to country" by co-operating with the naval authorities in the protection of our coast. For this purpose the Emergency Coast Service has been organized and steps are now being taken to prepare the Scouts in coast cities and towns for this service.

No scout may participate in this emergency coast service unless he makes voluntary application, has the approval of his parent or guardian and of his school authorities (if he is a school boy) and is recommended by his scoutmaster.

Records at the Boy Scout headquarters show that there are over 75,000 Boy Scouts living within a short distance of the sea coast, everyone eager to be of the greatest possible service to his country.
