BOY SCOUTS ARE TAUGHT SIGNALING TO DEVELOP ACCURACY AND ALERTNESS IN THEIR YOUNG MINDS

WIGWAGGING FROM HASTILY CONSTRUCTED PLATFORM

"Signaling is an important adjunct to Boy Scout work," said Lewis C. Buddy, field scout commissioner this morning. Boy Scouts are instructed in every department of signaling not so much for the immediate value of the knowledge as for the development of accuracy and alertness.

sorts and demonstrated their ability and worth should they be actually needed to relay signals if an enemy ship was sighted or a disaster occurred somewhere along the barren stretch of coast where there are no telephones.

Become Expert When scouts become interested in signaling they soon attain a degree of expertness that is not exceeded by the expert men of the United States army according to Mr. Buddy's statements. In various cities where the boys have specialized in signaling army men have refused to accept a challenge for a friendly contest with judges appointed to award the prize to the best signaller. Mr. Buddy will speak at 7:40 this evening at the headquarters of the Newsboys' Association at 9 o'clock. He is very much interested in newsboys and has done a great deal of work in other cities for the betterment of Newsboys' Association. Mr. Buddy will speak at 7:40 this evening at the Olivet Presbyterian Church. The campaign to raise $12,000 will be waged the latter part of next week.
