BEING FOLLOWED

Much Demand For Fish to Be "Planted" For Food by the Farming Districts

State Commissioner of Fisheries N. R. Buller, in the visiting of the farming districts, has been getting dozens of requests for young fish suitable to "plant" in fresh water ponds, small streams and other places along creeks. Some of the requests have come from men who are neighbors and who have gone together to raise fish for themselves.

As far as possible the department is sending young fish to farmers, a number of whom have also asked for young fish to be planted in their ponds. The department is looking after the young fish and to make such reports as are necessary. Owing to the demands from farming districts, the department has been required to reprint its bulletin on what an acre of water will do toward the fish food supply if properly handled.

The number of young trout put out this year has been large in spite of the cool season.
