The Sophs clustered their dozen tailles in the second, third and fourth hings, soft teams ran will ozen the Sophs stealing seven bases, while the Sophs stealing

Reading Is Big Winner

in Allison Hill Battle In a four-inning Allison Hill League baseball game last evening, the Reading team trimmed the Stanley A. C. by a score of 7 to 1. Platt, a former Dartmouth college pitcher, who is now teaching at the Academy, held the Stanley player to one hit, which was secured in the last inning. For the Readingites, "Putty" which was secured in the last inning. For the Readingites, "Putty" Lynch played well at first, while at the bat he secured two hits. "Don" Wertz was also there with the stick, and twice cleaned up with timely solid singles. The railroaders looked formidable with last night's line-up, and hope to get into championship class with a little more warm weather. The score by innings:

Under Three Flags

(The Stars and Stripes—the Tricolor—the Union Jack.)
There they fly to the breeze,
All of the self-same hue,
Thrown to the waiting winds,
The Red, the White and the Blue;
One from the heart of France,
One from the English loam,
And one from the eagle's resting place
Over the fields of Home

And one from the eagle's Over the fields of Home. Hovering over the crash.
All of the self-same blend,
On to the last frontier,
On to the story's end;
Roll by roll to the depths,
Staff by staff to the gale,
Wherever the clan goes driving on
Or ship of the realm may sail.

Having loosed the so-called Dogs of War, they are now taking their hides out in taxes.

Early Season Stuff

England thought as we do, once, That the war was far away; Why get worked up to a froth When we live beyond the fray? Since no storming foe can land On our shores with hostile tread? But the fields of France are thick With the graves of English dead.

There used to be an old saying that the Game of Life didn't consist of holding a good hand, but in playing a poor hand well. But the game of life to-day consists of holding a good hand and playing it to the last bet.

Why?

"Why," asks a reader, "should some ball clubs be more brittle than others? In age, condition and physique there is no great difference. Why, for one example, should the New York Yankees be more easily hurt than the New York Giants or the Boston Red Sox?"

Perhaps there is an answer attached to this query, and perhaps there isn't. Life is replete with quaint, odd little angles beyond the limited human ken. And this is one of them. All we know is that the records show that certain clubs are constantly broken up, while others rarely are. And the records fail to go in for reasons. They stop at the bleak barricade of facts,

It has been suggested that major league clubs cut down their forces to seventeen men. If this move is passed the Yanks will need conscription and a quota of volunteers to complete the schedule—provided no sudden change arrives in the allotment made by fate.

If the armies of Europe had suffered the same wounded list in proportion to Yankee injuries last year, over $,000,000 men would have been relied in one season. And this isn't a guess or a random remark.

By holding on to the Hon. Stuffy McInnis the season's records begin to indicate that Mr. Mack's dome of thought was working in its usual fancy fashion. The Hon. Stuffy is so far beyond Collins, Baker and Barry that the latter three can't even see his dust along the winding Highway of Swat.

Utica, N. Y., May 15 .- Harrisburg came through yesterday with another victory, defeating Utica, score 11 to It was a weird contest. The s. It was a weird contest. The Islanders walloped the ball and made a victory certain when six runs were scored in the fifth inning. The other feature of the game was the loose manner in which the visitors played and won out. They had 10 errors chalked up in the miscue column.

Bunched Hits Count

Bunched hits in the opening frame brought a trio of runs. Just to be liberal the Cockill crew let the Utes have two in the second in order to make the game look like real baseball. Two innings of tight pitching by Cooper and Fergueson brought no scores for each team. The fourth inning was Even Steven, bunch hits figuring in Harrisburg's rubs, and errors in those scored by the Utes.

Vandnais Comes In

Fergueson went out and Vandnais came in. He lasted only two innings when Frank Brower switched positions with the youngster. It was anything but a beschell reame until the press the results of the special meeting held by the National League in New York on Saturday, Secretary Heydler stated that the subject of starting the championship season later than the date decided upon by the major leagues for the last ten years was broached by two of the magnates. While the matter did not develop any extended discussion nor were any details brought out, there was a majority opinion against such a move. Mr. Heydler said by general consent the matter will be thoroughly discussed from twill be thoroughly discussed from every angle.

An Old Question

This is an old question that has forced itself before the councils of both leagues on numerous occasions in the past, but the weight of facts has always been against delaying the opening beyond the middle of the second week of April. To prove the postponements due to bad weather this year do not exceed those of past seasons the following figures are given covering the last five years, inclusive of 1917:
