Endorse Licensing Bill

The annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Association of Architects was held at the Bolton Hotel yesterday, delegates from each of the chapters in the state being present.

The bill recently introduced into the Legislature, providing for the licensing of architects, was endorsed. The association pledged itself to conduct an investigation among the presidents of the thirty-seven universities of the United States conferring degrees in architecture, on their attitude toward conducting more popular lectures on the subject of architecture and on other ways and mens calculated to make architecture a part of a liberal education, New officers are: Albert Kelsey, president, Philadelphia; Frederick A. Russell, vice-president, Pittsburgh; W. A. Plack, secretary, Philadelphia, and M. I. Kast, treasurer, Harrisburg.

The House reconsidered and then defeated the Maurer bill to allow second and third class cities to engage in dairying and farming. The Walker bill providing that the state might condemn road building material along roads was defeated after a prolonged debate.
