It is easier to preach than to practice. Every one knows that, but after Mary Miles Minter in "Environment" at the Regent picture in which she is featured, it is claimed that one goes away in a more neighborly spirit, a kinder feeling for the underdog; a resolution to try just a little harder to see the good in those who "never had a chance," and an unwillingness to condemn too soon. "Environment" is an understandable story, well pictured and artistically handled. The scenes are laid in a New England village. The story has happened many times and in many places, but it moves along to a happier conclusion than most real life stories. The attraction for Monday and Tuesday will be "The Spirit of Romance."
