LLAMAS RIVALED BY MOTOR TRUCKS HIGH UP IN ANDES

"High up in the Andes Mountains of Bolivia motor trucks have become the rivals of the llamas, which are so much used as beasts of burden in South America. Special interest attaches to this case of motor-truck service," says the Popular Mechanics Magazine, "because the vehicles, of which there are four, are employed at an altitude varying from two to three miles and more. These machines were supplied by a California concern to a mining company in Bolivia to carry tin ore to the railway station at Oruro, Bolivia. This city is 12,000 feet above se alevel, and the road which the cars traverse rises to 17,300 feet. This is undoubtedly one of the highest gasoline-truck route in the world. Although gasoline in this region costs $1.25 per gallon, it is claimed that the trucks show greater economy than the llamas, many of which are still used to carry ore. Each best's burden is about 100 pounds, which is carried only a few miles per day."

Entirely New Way to Banish Superfluous Hair

(Really Removes Roots and All)

Why should any woman continue to wear an ugly, humiliating growth of hair on her face, now that it is known this can be completely and quickly removed, roots and all, by the new phelactine process? The process is not to be compared at all with the depilatory, electrical or shaving methods. Phelactine is non-odorous, non-irritating, non-poisonous—so harmless it could be eaten without any bad effect. Best of all, the hairs come out entire, even the roots, before one's very eyes! The skin is left as smooth and hair-free as a child's.

Anyone who purchases a stick of phelactine from the druggist and follows the simple directions, is bound to be pleased and delighted—otherwise she can have her money back by merely asking for it.—Advertisement.
