There was something warm and appreciative in his tone, and I beamed.

Ing airplanes has been doubled dur-ing the war, while the ascending power of the airplane has been mul-tiplied ten times. The progress in aviation provoked by the needs of the national defense has given rise to speculation as to what advan-tages may be derived from it when peace has been restored. Letter and parcel carriers in regions lacking railroad communications is one sug-"And I want to ask your ad-vice!" The happy evening of the tired business woman fell in ruins about me. He was going to ask me to hurry home and listen to a four-act play he had written, or a fury-page motion picture synopsis. Drops of sweat beaded my brow. Every writer on the firing line knows and fears those ambuhed manuscripts which lie in wait for him at every turn of the road. "It's about getting married." The color came back to my cheek, the light to my eye. "Oh, thats easy," I said. "You either get married or you don't. It's pure-ly a matter of choice. "That's the difficulty," he pon-dered solemnly. "Now, what would you consider the two most desir-able things in life?" "Every one makes a different es-timate," I replied. "What would you?"

"Levery one makes a unterent es-"imate," I replied. "What would you?" "Love and success," he asserted without hesitation, thus showing that he had given the matter thought. "Now I," he frowned, "have won a measure of success." "It does not require a Sherlock Holmes to tell me that," I assured him. "Any man who can order a dinner in these days without study-ing the prices on the menu must indeed have prospered. But it is odd that you should have intro-duced this particular subject," I broke off, "because I have a letter at home from a man who is tor-mented by the same perplexity," "What does he say?" he asked eagerly, that he has devoted his

"What does he say." ... eagerly. "Why, that he has devoted his younger years to building up an im-portant business, and that now, when he is between forty and fifty he wishes to establish the ties of home. But he is so afraid of draw-ing a blank and being miserable for the rest of his life that he doesn't dare venture."

"My case exactly." Herbert non-ded. "What advice did you give him?" "Nothing as yet. All I could think of was to tell him not to be faint-hearted, and that 'One day with life and heart is more than time enough to find a wife.' But that sounded flippant. It's apparent that he has very consistently guarded himself against the danger of falling in love."

against the danger of failing in love." "Well, I don't think he should be blamed for that," contended Her-bert. He wants something more than merely to get married. He wants a delightful and congenial compan-ion, a woman with similar tastes and a sympathetic nature. At least that's the way I feel." "Yes, and both of you are un-willing to incur any risks in the ven-ture. But there's no undertaking in life that I ever heard of where you don't have to take risks and plenty of them."

If that I ever heard of where you of them." "It isn't that we lack courage," insisted Herbert, who had now made his case identical with that of my correspondent. "It's rather an em-barrassment due to the fact that we feel ourselves on unfamiliar ground." "But look at this side of it." I argued. "Either of you is sure enough of himself in matters of business, otherwise you would hard-ly have achieved the success of which you boast. That shows that you are accustomed to take risks and discount them. Both of you, I-haven't a doubt, have always mini-mized the risks where it could be done; but still there have been a lot of hurdles that you've had to take at full speed and without know-ing just where you were going to land. As businessmen you are trained to a constant calculation and weighing of chances; to do so is sec-ind nature to you by this time. You know that in business, when there's subordinate to the spirit behind the doing of it, because the determina-tion and the energy that one puts into it are what bring it to a success

Washington, D. C., May 22. — Sena-tor Perrose, ranking Republican member of the finance committee which is revamping the war revenue bill, declared yesterday that it was not necessary to raise more than $1,-000,000,000 by direct taxation. He is working hard for the elimination of the 10 per cent. ad valorem tax on articles now on the free list, as well as the abolition of the retroactive feature of the income tax. In this he is supported by all the Republicans of the committee and sentiment among the Democrats is not aggress ively opposed to the change in both respects.

STOR

Uninterrupted and increased business is of vital mportance to the welfare of this community NOW. This is not the time for retrenchment.

The greatest EXTRAVAGANCE possible is UN-WISE economy; on the other hand the greatest ECONOMY possible is WISE buying. REGARDLESS of the increased costs of building naterials and labor we are going ahead with our plans for a Bigger Kaufman Store and a Greater Kaufman Business.

We are going to Build, Build, Build!

The building recently purchased by us at 121 Market street, is now being dismantled and will be rebuilt to conform with and be a part of our present building in Market Square.

This building when completed will give us the much needed over 4,000 square feet of floor space necessary for a Greater Kaufman Service.

Incidentally our building operations will help to keep business going, keep money in circulation, give employment to many mechanics and laborers of various classes, and be an example, which, if followed by others, will go far towards offsetting the least ossibility of a business slump in this community.

Keep business going is a good patriotic slogan Depend upon the Kaufman store to do its share to keep business going by continuing its policy of underselling, bringing the best and most reliable merchandise to your door at the lowest possible cost above the cost of production.

THE WAR and the

Encyclopaedia Britannica

WE have decided to undertake the preparation of a New Volume to be added to the present 29 volumes of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, 11th Edition.

The New Volume will be devoted to the war and will have the effect of bringing the information in the Encyclopaedia Britannica down to the date of the conclusion of peace.

It will contain a full and authoritative account of the historical background out of which the war sprang, with special reference to the political, social and racial conflict of interests of all the nations concerned

It will give exhaustive treatment to the progress of the war, step by step and in all countries.

It will show the immediate results of the war not only on the military side, but on the economic side as well, and it will thus enable the reader to foresee its ultimate results in the readjustments that will follow in all nations. The war's geographical results will also be fully dealt with, and new maps, to take place of present ones, will be given wherever there are changes in present boundaries.

The new volume will be written on the same high level of authority, comprehensiveness and impartiality which has always distinguished the Encyclopaedia Britannica, and which has made its pronouncements on any controversial subject of unique value to the reader.

The editor will take especial care to give readers a judicial account of the war, and will exercise such control over the contributors that the narrative will be free from partisan feeling and national prejudice. Those who will be asked to contribute will be writers of the same standing and qualifications as those who wrote for the Britannica itself.

The magnitude of the war, in which practically all countries are directly concerned, makes it necessary that its history should be treated with the high authority that can only be attained by employing the incomparable resources of the Britannica; it also calls for the putting into concrete and authoritative form, for present-day readers and for posterity, of the facts of a chapter of history which will be of immeasurable influence on the future of civilization everywhere in the world. The War Volume will be, in fact, a complete reference work on the greatest war of history, and in its own field just as good a book as the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

TO SAVE LIVES

Havre, May 23.—A life saving ap-paratus, consisting of a chart-house which can be detached from the deck of a sinking ship in twenty sec-onds and made watertight in a few minutes, has been invented by a Belgian engineer attached to King Albert's staff. It contains fifteen sleeping berths and ten fresh water' tanks.

I thought I had a restful evening before me-just the sort of thing that a tired business woman would enjoy. The restaurant held a par-ticularly large number of interest-ing types, and one of the most anus-ing games in the world is to sit in a restaurant sipping one's coffee and building up the characteristics, oc-cupations and fortunes of people one has never seen before and never ex-pects to see again. The New Volume will not only give a fair, unbiased and full account of the war itself-how it started, how it was fought, the changes and innovations it brought about-but it will also deal with the results of the war outside the sphere of fighting. Particular attention will be given to those economic factors in the present war which have led to the adoption by all the belligerents of new measures to safeguard their national welfare. Articles will also be written to tell of any new discoveries or progress in industry and science.

For instance, in surgery, aviation, submarine warfare and public hygiene there have been developments of primary importance. These and any other advances in knowledge will be fully dealt with. This will virtually make the New Volume a supplement to the Encyclopaedia Britannica itself. Whether peace shall be made this year, next year, or the year after, the additional new matter will bring the contents of the Britannica abreast of the world's knowledge as it stands when peace has been made.

The date of publication will be as soon as possible after the end of the war.

> THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA, per / Thomas President.

P. S .- We have received hundreds of letters asking about this New Volume since a newspaper paragraph announced that it was to be published. We therefore now wish to inform all owners of the Britannica that they will in due course be notified of the date of publication.

This New Volume will be issued in bindings to match their sets, whether they bought The Cambridge University issue or the low-priced "Handy Volume" Issue, and the price at which it will be sold to owners of the Britannica will be the same as they paid per volume for the set of the Britannica which they already own.

doing of it, because the determina-tion and the energy that one puts into it are what bring it to a success-ful issue." "All true," agreed Herbert, "but this matter of marriage is a venture in a new direction. It's of grave significance to me, and also evident-ly to this correspondent of yours, not to make a mistake. Naturally we hesitate."
