Foust's Agents Confiscate Foods Which Were Stored in Anthracite Region

Food speculators who have been stacking up provisions in cold storage warehouses in Pennsylvania in the hope that they will be able to carry them into periods when the pieces will be higher have been running up against some pretty serious snags in the shape of dairy and food agents who have had no hesitancy in condemning food found stored beyond the legal limit.

One report from Luzerne and Lackawanna counties to Dairy and Food Commissioner James Foust showed that a State agent had outlawed eleven whole carcasses which had been stored by a supposed speculator.

SCHOOL PUPILS HONOR VETERANS WITH EXERCISES

Civil War Survivors Speak at Patriotic Meetings in City's Schools

Stories of great sacrifices for the country more than fifty years ago, appeals to the youth—urging them to stand by the United States, and patriotic demonstrations by school students in Technical and Central High Schools and all the grade buildings featured the Memorial exercises all over the city to-day.

This morning veterans from the city Grand Army posts spoke at the high schools. In the afternoon another large delegation visited every other building in the city, a few stopping at each one to participate in the program of the day.

At the Technical High School, Dr. John Price Jackson, State Commissioner of labor and industry, in paying a tribute to the Civil War veterans, said that in preparing for the present conflict, honor should be paid to these veterans.

Breaks Out Again The debris of the Sander home in Front street started to blaze last evening at 8 o'clock and the Highspire fire company was called out. A chemical stream was put on and played on all night.
