June Time in the Shops Graduate and the June Bride

The question of what to give the June bride is often answered by the selection of a piece of cut glass, and the delicate sparkle of the many charming designs shown in the special display of wedding gifts at Jacob Tausig's Sons, 420 Market street, suggests many gift possibilities. There are elaborate punch bowls with glasses or cups to match, gorgeous vases of exquisite grace, bowls of various sizes and unusual designs and many other pieces equally indispensable to the complete appointments of the bride's new home, and the prices asked at Tausig's offer the greatest values at the smallest expense.

A Good Hostess

"You can always depend upon it," said a woman in speaking of Grand Union coffee. "The first pound I have sought since has been just as good. The quality never varies, never denige. It is uniformly delicious." After all that is the thing that counts most when buying a staple product like coffee, for if you can't depend upon its good. The quality never varies, never coeffee to your friends that you will be ashamed of, while if you will be ashamed of, while if you will get the reputation of being a product like coffee. The first pound I have good, —unusually good, I thought,—but every pound I have good, —unusually good. The quality never varies, never coeffee. The quality never varies, never the greatest values and unusual designs, and many other pieces equally indispensable to the complete appointments of the bride's new home, and the prices asked at Tausig's offer the greatest values at the smallest expense.
