Five Cents Additional Charge For Special Deliveries of Ice

N most lines of business the cost of delivery is small in proportion to the gross amount of the business, so that few merchants need to give it serious consideration.

But in the ice business the delivery ex-. pense is the most important feature.

Special Deliveries of Ice in many instances costs considerable more than the cost of the

In order to keep the expenses of doing business this year down to a minimum, special deliveries of ice will cost 5c in addition to the regular price.

A 10c piece of ice by special delivery will cost 15c. A 50-pound piece will cost five cents more than the regular price, etc., etc.

While the small additional sum of five cents for this special service may seem insignificant yet when the extra work is spread over an entire season, this small charge will help considerable to reduce in the aggregate the oost of doing Ice Business and help us to maintain present retail prices.
