Legislators Are Held Up by Devon Wreck

Owing to the delay of legislators from Philadelphia and eastern counties by the wreck at Devon, the assembling of the House of Representatives after the Memorial and Registration Day recesses had to be deferred from 1:30 to 3 o'clock to-day. It was the first time this session that the start of a meeting had to be postponed.

The House was scheduled to meet at 1 o'clock and Representative W. T. Ramsey of Delaware designated to preside by Speaker Baldwin, counted noses at that hour. He found less than fifty members on hand. Half an hour later another count was made, but the House was still short of a quorum. The presiding officer then declared no quorum present and announced that the call to order would be made at 3 o'clock.

It is the idea to hold a session late to-day and to devote to-night to committee meetings. Meetings will be held to-morrow and on Friday, too. If enough members can be kept here, the Senate got started at 1:30 with a scanty attendance and took up routine business. It will take a recess until later in the day and then meet to-morrow, when it will quit for the week. Few of the senatorial leaders were here.

There were reports this afternoon that members of the upper house are in favor of amending the House resolution to adjourn on June 14 to read June 28. If this is decided upon, things will be speeded up next week.

MRS. KONORER DIES Mrs. Prietta Konorer, aged 79, widow of Henry Konorer, of Williamsport, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Rettinger, 1466 Zarker street, yesterday at 2:15 o'clock. Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Rev. Thomas Reich, pastor of the Christ Lutheran Church, will officiate. Burial will be made in the Paxtang Cemetery. Mrs. Konorer is survived by two sons, Michael and Aaron; two daughters, Mrs. Rettinger, of this city, and Mrs. Hannah Shannon, of the state of Washington.

RUSSIAN REVOLT UPSETS ALLIES' CAMPAIGN PLAN

London Expert Declares Outlook Was Good Before Socialists Took Power

London, June 6.—The military correspondent of the Times, discussing the Russian situation, says in effect that the Russian revolution has wrecked the plans for the entente allied campaign of 1917. The correspondent tries to take a hopeful view that Russia may yet strike useful blows, but he shows no great confidence.

The writer says the situation of the Russian armies before the outbreak of the revolution was extremely favorable. The losses of 1916 had been made good, the depots filled, a great number of new divisions were created and guns and munitions were steadily increasing in quantity. This latter was not merely the result of an increasing output from the Russian factories, but was also due to the fact that the allies had sent hundreds of guns and millions of rounds of ammunition in the month of March. The Russian were prepared to make good use of them against the common enemy. The correspondent continues: "The Russian army is, passably equipped and, although internal difficulties of transport and supply were far from overcome, the Russian military chiefs assured us that we could count this year on the energetic support of Russian armies, both in Europe and in Asia Minor."

"On the faith of these assurances, the campaign of 1917 was planned. The Franco-British offensive in the Balkans was designed to open early in the year so as to forestall a German attack, whether in the east or west, and help our Russian allies by calling their attention to the fact that we could count on their energetic support of the enemy. In the same spirit of good comradeship, Murray, on the borders of Palestine and Mesopotamia, proceeded to attract to themselves as many Turkish divisions as possible, thus lightening the task of the Russian army in the Caucasus."

"Our operations proceeded as planned and we attacked to the west the best German divisions, of which 150,000 are on our hands. Italy stepped gallantly into the arena as soon as the season permitted while Belgium and Portugal took the field. Thus all the west European allies were gathered at the trysting places and became engaged in hard fighting, with the result of facilitating Russia's task. We have decidedly done so and although 76 German divisions and some 35 Austro-Hungarian divisions still face Russia they are mainly landwehr, landsturm or tired regulars of the reserves, while the constant stream of German heavy guns has recently flowed from the east to the west, stiffening the German defense of which recent reports of the fighting gave proof."

Ground For Hope "The allied campaign in the west must be judged in relation to the anticipated timely co-operation of the Russian armies, which were early in March, two or three times superior numerically to the Austro-Germans facing them. Thanks to the devotion of the western allies, a brilliant campaign by the gallant Russian armies seemed assured and their intervention was timed for a certain date. But when the date came no Russian intervention occurred."

The writer pays a hearty tribute to the efforts and sacrifices of the Russian since the beginning of the war, but says it is virtually impossible for Russia to transform her political institution at the crisis of a great war, without being any way temporarily incapacitated. The correspondent finds ground for hope in the Russian character and sees the possibility of a sudden rally which would carry the Russian armies over the German lines in a tumultuous horde.

NEWSPAPERS ARE COMMENDED FOR RECRUITING WORK

Capt. Harrell Loath to Enlist Reporters Because of Patriotic Efforts

"Without the daily and active co-operation of the newspapers of the city, instead of Pennsylvania leading the nation and this district leading the state, we would doubtless be far short of our quota," said Captain Harrell who has charge of the local recruiting station this morning.

Captain Harrell paid tribute to the work local newspapers have done in bringing the Harrisburg district to the fore. He said further that the newspapers is the only practical way of interesting people in the crisis now confronting the nation.

The shrdtuactioerhdoolalolalalan because of the value he places on the efforts of the men who have written the recruiting stories and boosted every patriotic move for the good of the nation, Captain Harrell said he was loath to enlist any more men from the Harrisburg newspapers.

At the present time every local paper has been crippled because of the men who have left to enlist in the national service. Many newspapermen will be exempted under the conscription act which says "that all those engaged in maintaining national interest in war" will be excused. This is because the government recognizes the value of the newspapers of the country. So far as can be learned not a single newspaperman in Harrisburg applied for exemption on his registration card.

Parin Gets Warning Sergeant Ira Parin who was formerly connected with the local recruiting station and now has charge of the Reading station yesterday received an anonymous letter advising him Reading was not a "heavenly place" for him and telling him to leave. It is believed the excellent results that Parin has secured in Reading welcomed by an antimilitarist to write the letter.

The following young men of Harrisburg and vicinity enlisted yesterday as soon as they had registered: Paul Aspenbach, Marysville; Joseph Poff, Duncannon; John Needham, Joseph King, David Crowe, John Sumner, George Warrington, Oscar Stephens, Enoch Owl, Andrew Connor, all Indians from the Indian school; Nick Ciello, 1923 North Seventh street; Nic. Diriton, 1923 North Seventh street; Gottsoo Di-Marko, 148 South Third street; Supine Palucisiane, Italians born in Italy; Benjamin F. Barnhardt, 2147 North Fourth street.

FIANCE COMES HERE TO FUNERAL

have been a roommate of Klerner's, yesterday: "My Osborne: Just a few lines to let you know the mis-hap Eph. had Sunday morning. A pipe busted and scalded him badly around the face. He died Sunday afternoon. Will be buried from brother's home, at Steelton, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. His last words were: 'Tell the people in Newark. They are my best friends.' If there is anything I can do let me know. Elmer Kline."

Meet W. Miss Osborne and her mother took the first train for this city, hoping to arrive before the services were held. They arrived about midnight and immediately went to what they supposed to be his boardinghouse, at 235 South Fifteenth street. Instead of his boardinghouse, they were informed they had been married four years and had two children.

When Mrs. Osborne endeavored to discover why the family had never known of his trips to Newark she was told Klerner had always said he was going to ball games. However, Mrs. Osborne declared this morning the wife admitted knowing of the purchase of a watch and a ring for another woman, but who the other woman was she did not know.

According to the story told by the pretty bride-to-be this morning, she met Klerner a year ago. Since that time he has been bothering her with attention. Three letters arrived at the Newark home every week. Prior to Christmas he had been bothering her with attention. She consented. He promised to buy an engagement ring immediately but waited a month, giving the death of his father as an excuse. Last night she discovered that his father is still living.

The extent of the falseness of his position and the attitude he maintained toward the girl whom he has wronged was pointed out by Mrs. Osborne, who recalled what a perfect gentleman he always posed to be. When the Osborne girl always asked the blessing at meals, he spoke constantly of his church connections in this city and the many fine Christian people who were his friends.

Brought Her Here

He succeeded not only in fooling the little girl who trusted him so blindly, but the entire family. He did everything to ingratiate himself in their good graces. Mrs. Osborne recalled how lovingly he had always spoken of her as "mother," and of his never-failing injunction when parting, "Now mother, be sure and take good care of my little girl."

At one time he brought Miss Osborne to this city and, according to her statement, used a railroad pass. She did not know that he could not carry her on a pass unless as a sister or a wife, and this morning she said she did not know how the pass was made out but supposed that, unknown to her, she had been coming as his wife. When the arrived in this city he showed her points of interest but did not offer to take her to his boardinghouse, where he had said she could meet his relatives. They returned the same evening. Later he again wanted to bring her to the city but her mother refused to give permission.

Appeal to Police

When the mother and heart-broken daughter realized the situation this morning they appealed to the police to take any action possible. Constable David Hodge, of the Twelfth ward, arrested Klerner and took him to the police station to face the pair whom he had wronged. It was impossible to bring any charge against him in this state and when or not he will be sued for breach of promise in New Jersey could not be learned. Klerner, however, furnished the money for all the expenses incurred during the trip and they left at noon to-day for Newark. Prior to their going, however, both expressed much satisfaction at being rid of what they termed, "bad rubbish."
