

Mary Had a Little Lamb

By HILDEGARDE HAWTHORNE of the Vigilantes

We are being asked to save; but to save in an odd way. We are not to stop buying the pretty things, the interesting things, the frolics and the inspirations of life, lace, jewels, book pictures, old furniture, charming, exquisite, automobiles; the list is endless, with many people out of employ and many businesses on the rocks. But when it comes to necessities, then indeed...

stock of food animals is lower than it should be; the world needs meat as well as bread. But no one, not even a husky man working at some bodily task for eight hours out of the twenty-four, needs meat three times a day.

There are two ways of increasing the world's stock of meat. One is to breed more animals for slaughtering. The other is to cut down unnecessary consumption and to eliminate all waste.

Mary's little lamb followed her to school. Uncle Sam's little lamb can lead us to school. It can teach us that meat once a day is healthful, often more than that it is likely to bring a host of stomach troubles, to harden arteries, to endanger the heart action, to put unnecessary labor on the kidneys.

To us women falls the duty of saving so that the world's meat stock will be increased in so far that it will be made to go further. To the farmer and the stockman falls the duty of breeding more sheep and more hogs.

No part of the meat should be thrown away. There comes in another saving. Be careful with the scraps of steak, the ends of ham bones, the remainder of the cold lamb or beef. Every cookbook is full of excellent receipts for the use of these portions. It is more trouble, of course, to save and use the fragments than to order a new roast. But it is not so much of a sacrifice as it is to serve your country in a trench or a ship or an aeroplane. And it is, in its way, as important.

Remember, when you save on luxuries you may be doing harm. When you save on necessities you are helping win the war. You are releasing what you do not require and what you have perhaps been wasting for the use of men and women and children who are starving.

Be like Mary. Have a little lamb, and be satisfied with it. It only needs proper management, a little planning, closer study of the cook-book and some change in our wasteful, extravagant habit of eating. If you cut your consumption of meat in half, that half will go to someone who needs it. There is only just so much meat to be had. It is enough, if it is carefully and wisely handled. The breeders will do their share in increasing the amount but that is a slow process. For the next year or two it depends on you, the women of the nation, to make what there is go as far as possible. There will be no trouble in finding a market for the meat you do not eat, nor for the other necessities on which you manage to save. The world is clamoring for them.

DECEDENT CODE GIVEN APPROVAL

Monumental Work of Commission Appointed by Governor During 1915

Governor Brumbaugh late yesterday announced his approval of the new code of laws relative to decedents' estates, which was drafted by the State Decedents Law Commission and presented in the House by Mr. Swartz, Dauphin. The commission was composed of Judges John Marshall Gest, Philadelphia, and Thomas J. Baldrige, Blair, and ex-Speaker George E. Alter, Allegheny.

Seven bills comprise the code, including bills relative to intestacy, which takes effect December 31, 1917; wills also effective on the last day of this year and applying to wills of persons dying on that day; intestate succession, revised prices, register of wills' powers and orphan's courts.

This code replaces the decedents' estate laws of the thirties and supplements them. It abolishes among other things distinctions between real and personal property and makes the same reciprocal rights of husbands and wives in all respects.

Four of the Liberty Loan bonds, of $50 denominations, were subscribed.

Webster, this city, local organizer, who urged the purchase of the bonds during a patriotic speech to the women. Funds are now being considered to enroll the two other local Nests in the purchase of a portion of the city's allotment of $1,000,000.
