NEGRO KILLED IN SHOOTING AFFRAY

Many Shots Exchanged in South Fourth Street Boardinghouse

George Johnson, colored, was shot and killed in a wrangle in a South Fourth street boardinghouse about midnight. Ned Rodgers, who fired the shot, got away after the shooting and is still at large.

Johnson was shot through the abdomen and lived, until early this morning at the Harrisburg Hospital, where he was taken. According to a story of the police, the two negroes were engaged in a battle with revolvers before Johnson was shot. The police investigating this morning found a mirror broken by shots, and many lodged in the walls about the room.

The two roomed together and the cause of the wrangle is not known. The police were not notified until about half an hour after the shooting and by that time Rodgers had a good start toward Middletown. An automobile was obtained and Patrolman Fisher and Constable Gibbs, with several residents, scoured the entire lower end of the country, but were unable to locate the assailant. The officers returned this morning at 4 o'clock. Johnson was thirty years old and his home was in Alton, S. C. He was employed by the local steel company in the blast furnace department. Rodgers worked in the merchant mill.
