Be Implicated With Allison
For Giving Warning

It is possible that not only Glenn Allison but another city detective will be implicated in the charges made last evening when Allison was accused of having warned the inmates of a house at 1702 Fulton street, while carrying a warrant for their arrest.

No doubt exists in the minds of the police officials that the inmates had been warned of the descent upon the place.

According to a statement made this morning by one of those present at the time cill the worners present.

	Their arress. No doubt exists in the minds of the police officials that the inmates had been warned of the descent upon the place. According to a statement made this morning by one of those present at the time all the women were fully dressed, apparently patiently waiting for the arrival of the officers, although it was late at night. "Aw, we knew it was coming," one girl is reported to have said. Although it was at an hour when the red lights twinkle brightest nobedy but the inmates were in the house when the officers arrived. The accusation against Allison was made last evening at a hearing before Alderman James B. Deshong, when Mrs. Maude Walters, of 1702 Fulton street, was charged with keeping a disorderly house. According to testimony offered by Mrs. J. N. Foltz, 2333 Jefferson street, who brought the charge, information was made at the police station April 20, but no arrests were made. At that time Detective Allison was assigned to the case. As is usual in such cases no arrests were made at once, but he was instructed to "keep an eye" on the place. "A WONDERFUL STREET"

Mrs. William Henderson, president of the Civic Club of Harrisburg, says of this beautiful community effort:
"I think I have never seen a beter example of neighborhood work than the planting and beautifying of the backyards of Park and Regina streets, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth and facing Helen avenue. Every yard is perfect and almost uniform. I hope that it may be an incentive to other neighborhoods. I call it a wonderful street."

triotic demonstrations were the high lights of the second annual sessions of the World's Salesmanship Congress, held last week at Detroit. Speakers of national prominence gave addresses or read papers on livewire topics, taking up all branches of the business world.

Among the speakers was C. H. Hunter, president of the Salesman Club of Harrisburg, and vice-president and general manager of sales and advertising of the Elliott-Fisher Company, who gave an address on "How Product Is Used in the Sale." Other Harrisburgers who were present were Robinson Murray and W. R. Busch.

Uniform Rates
In cases where "two number" calling is now substituted for "particular person" calling the revised rates are determined on the same basis—as above mentioned—on uniform rates for like distances; and while some of the charges remain unchanged, certain of them have been reduced and a few have been increased.

There follows a comparison of certain of the old and new rates to points near by.

ROTARIANS GO TO WELLSVILLE

Are Guests of E. J. Lewis at Big Factory of Leather Products Co.

Members of the Harrisburg Rotary Club were delightfully entertained yesterday by E. J. Lewis, manager of the Harrisburg Leather Products Company, at the factories of that corporation in Harrisburg and at Wellsville, York county. The Ro-tarians met at the Harrisburg fac-tory at Reily and Wyeth streets, at 4 o'clock, and after an inspection of the industry, left for Wellsville by automobile.

the industry, left for Wellsville by automobile.

The big end of the business is now done at this place, where enormous quantities of shoes for babies are turned out. The Harrisburg factory building long ago was outgrown by the expanding business and the York county plant was put into operation about a year ago. The product of the company is sold all over the country, through some of the largest wholesale, retail and mail order houses doing business, and it is not any longer a question of finding a market, but of trying to produce sufficient goods to keep orders up to date.

This was not always trye. Before market, but of trying to produce sufficient goods to keep orders up to date.

This was not always true. Before Mr. Lewis took charge of the company it had a hard fight for eixstence but after its reorganization, the clearing up of all debts and the taking over of the property by the new corporation it got rapidly upon its feet and is now one of the most prosperous shoemaking industries in Central Pennsylvania. All this was set forth by Mr. Lewis in his address to the club yesterday.

Previous to the business meeting in the factory at Wellsville substantial refreshments were served, and the Rotarians given all the strawberries and cream, both home produced, that they could stow away.

While this was to have been the final meeting of the summer, the club accepted the invitation of Robert J. In addition to Mr. Lewis the Rotarians heard brief but interesting addresses by J. Milligan, head of the big Wellsville Whip Company, established away back in 1837, which cocupies a beautiful stone factory building on the outskirts of town, and sells its products all over the world; and by W. D. Brougher, head of the Horsenet Manufacturing Company, another large and thriving Wellsville concern. Mr. Lewis also infroduced to the Rotarians John D.
